MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — The sight of white calves with black noses, legs, and ears capering beside their mothers this spring will turn the heads of more than a few passersby in Myerstown this spring.

One of Wenger's favorite characteristics about the British White Park breed is their calm, even temperament.

Lancaster Farming's 2001 Reference Guide to Animal Health and Housing, included in this issue, features information about livestock certification, dairy reproduction troubleshooting, news for cattle feeders, avian influenza identification and control, foot and mouth disease information, and other items.

Poultry Council's Annual Fundraiser Features Mattea

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — An evening of fellowship and fun marks PennAg Industries Association Poultry Council's annual fundraising banquet.

The "dinner theater"-type program, Monday, April 9 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, features entertainment by Kathy Mattea.

Mattea combines country, folk, pop, and gospel ideals to craft music that "explores the kind of love most people profess to want: full of safety, security, dedication, and intensity," according to promotional materials from the Council.

Last year about 1,200 attended the dinner theater at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

According to Jim Shirk, vice president of the Council, about $70,000 was raised at last year's event.

The money, he said, pays for Council education programs and legislative work for the poultry industry.

"We have a strong poultry health program, and we work very closely with the state," he said.

Programs involve education

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Animal disease was the center of attention for legislators, university researchers, veterinarians, and producers gathered here at the capitol building Wednesday.

The meeting also worked to highlight the challenge that agriculture is facing and help producers take precautions and learn how to respond if a disease arrives in the U.S.

Because of England's outbreak, and the vast amount of media attention which has been centered on the disease, foot and mouth disease was the much-discussed topic of the meeting. Legislators had a broad range of questions for the authorities present.

Disease symptoms include blisters on the coronary band, in the interdigital spaces, inside the mouth on the tongue, lips, or gums, on the udder and teats, and on the snout of pigs. Excessive salivation and lameness are also classic symptoms.

A suspected case should be immediately reported. At the

ATLANTA, GA.
March 31, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Prices were sharply higher on yolks, unchanged to higher on blends, unchanged to slightly higher on whole, and unchanged on whites when compared to a week earlier. Trading was light and very irregular. Offerings continue to be held with confidence on yolks, other items were usually sufficient for trade needs. The undertone remained firm on yolks, unsettled on whites, and usually steady whole. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending March 24, 2001 were 1 % more than the the previous week, and 3 % more than a year ago. Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
REport Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest remained light and selective during midweek trading, with most dealers cautious and unwilling to build existing floorstocks significantly. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts and bone-in breasts were usually available. Legs and drums were at least adequate. Leg quarters continued to clear well, and tenderloins had become more closely balanced. Wings were usually sufficient. Movement into retail and distributive channels was limited as holiday items began to make their way into the market. The market tone was fully steady to instances firm on leg quarters and tenderloins, about steady on the balance.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained mostly light and unaggressive. Offerings were irregular in both size and volume, however, wherever extra product was available it was generally noted as discounted in an effort to stimulate buyer interest. Live supplies were about moderate; weights varied in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 51 to 65 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. Bone-in and boneless skinless breasts were slow to clear. Leg quarters, bone-in and boneless skinlesss thighs were tight. Wings were adequate

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Both grain and soybean bids closed slightly higher. Trade is supported due to favorable planting weather and the possibility for corn acres moving to soybeans this year. Bids were higher for Wheat 1 to 7 cents, Corn 2 to 4 cents higher, Sorghum 6 cents higher, and Soybeans bids was 5 to 7 cents higher.

Wheat bids were higher with moderate export business, but is still quite limited. Crop conditions remain encouraging and the lower value of the dollar may offer addition tenders for export. Corn bids mostly higher, as weather conditions slowly taking influence on fieldwork duties. Slight advances in soybean prices, as a wet spring favoring more soybeans acreage.

However, upcoming Brazilian harvest limiting upturns.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

GOOD FRIDAY, APRIL 13

TANSY CAKE? WE'LL PASS

Easter and Greek Orthodox Easter coincide this year—both fall on April 15, along with tax day. Tansy cakes were once customary Easter fare. Tansy (Tanacetum vulgare, also called gold buttons) is a bitter herb, once added to spring tonics that were sometimes prescribed after Lenten fasts Tansy has a dubious reputation now, however, because it is potentially toxic unless administered by a trained herbalist Nevertheless, its name comes from the Greek word for immortality The flower of Saint Athanasius, tansy was sometimes worn in amulets to protect against worms, or planted around porches to repel ants It is still used for its insecticidal action For Easter cakes, choose something sweeter!

Good Friday rain brings a fertile year.

TIP OF THE WEEK

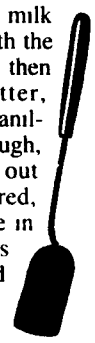
GREEK SESAME COOKIES

5 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
1/2 cup milk
2 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
6 ounces sesame seeds

Preheat oven to 350°F Sift the dry ingredients into a bowl Melt butter and add it to the flour mixture, mixing well Make a well and add the milk Beat the eggs with the sugar until thick, then add to the batter, along with the vanilla. Knead the dough, then roll or pat out cookies, as desired, and roll each one in the sesame seeds Bake on a greased cookie sheet for 20 minutes



Makes 24 cookies.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

April and May between them make bread for all the year.

April 15 is called Swallows Day by some, for it is then that they appear.

OPINION

Outward Signs

Each year the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program presents the Dairy of Distinction Award to farms that provide a positive image to the dairy industry.

A clean, well-kept, neat dairy makes a good impression on friends and neighbors and shows how distinctive and high quality farm life can be.

It also does one more thing and does it well — promotes the industry to those who know little if anything about farming.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the program and professor of dairy sciences at Penn State.

Roadside judging begins in May. Judges will look at a wealth of factors, including clean and attractive buildings, good landscaping, stewardship of the land, and well-maintained fences. Animal and barnyard cleanliness are also key. Manure management is on the judges' agendas, too.

It's not too late to apply. We've had ads running in the paper for quite some time now. Call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 to obtain an application form, or fill in the blanks in the ad form.

These days, you have to promote your industry to stay viable, to stay healthy. Newspapers do it. So should dairies.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

Scripture verses, notes of encouragement and compassion have poured into the Swarey household, building their hope and faith. The contributions and auction participation have made it possible for Lena's expenses to be covered.

The Swarey family has said their gratitude can't be expressed in words. Because of how deeply touched they are and all the emotions still pulling at their hearts, they've asked for help in trying to express their thanks.

Certainly these words don't do their feelings justice. Thank you to all those who spread the word of Lena's accident. Thank you to St. Christopher's Children's Hospital of Philadelphia for their early excellent care of Lena and to the physicians and hospital staff for their early intervention and treatment. No doubt her current rate of recovery is due in part to their early actions. Thank you also to St. Christopher's for the huge reduction of the actual cost of the hospital stay, for the unseen foundations, like the Burn Foundation of Philadelphia, that fund St. Christopher's enabling them to provide such a reduction for uninsured burn patients.

The Swarey family is especially deeply grateful to Shriners Burn Center in Cincinnati. They have been so good to Lena and to the Swarey family. If you have an opportunity, remember the Shriners Hospitals in your charitable giving, which provide free medical care to thousands of children. They will continue to provide free treatment of Lena and take care of her future skin grafts.

And to our own local volunteer EMT's, who responded quickly and professionally, gaining valuable time in preserving Lena's life, the Swarey family extends their heartfelt thanks. To the many organizations, churches, school children, businesses and individuals who helped, thank you! To all those in our community who brought food, for donations to the auc-

Now Is The Time

To Understand Foot And Mouth Disease

The recent outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Europe has caused a great amount of concern for livestock producers in the U.S.

The first step in developing a program to protect your farm is to gain an understanding of the disease.

"Foot and mouth disease is one of the most highly contagious animal diseases known," said Penn State Extension veterinarian David Griswold.

Foot and mouth disease — sometimes called hoof and mouth — is a highly contagious viral disease that can infect cloven-hooved animals such as cattle, swine, sheep, goats and deer, as well as other domesticated and wild animals, including hedgehogs, rats and mice. Infections in humans are rare and nonfatal.

Infected animals suffer blisters and ulcers in their mouth and nose, and on their feet, teats, and udders. These lesions often lead to excessive salivation and lameness.

Foot and mouth normally is not fatal to adult animals, but it can sharply reduce agricultural productivity. Painful mouth and tongue lesions can cause reduced feeding. Milk production of infected cows drops sharply and may never fully rebound. Meat animals may not regain lost weight for several months. The disease also can cause abortion and low rates of conception. An outbreak in the U.S. could cost the dairy and livestock industries billions of dollars in losses.

One of the most challenging aspects of this disease is how easily it can be spread, which makes the disease difficult to contain. "Direct contact with ill or carrier animals is the most obvious method of transmission," said Griswold. "But the virus can survive for several weeks on contaminated clothing and can live for days or weeks in the lungs, nasal passages, or tonsils of humans. In addition, airborne particles can travel up to 40 miles, and the virus can be carried in contaminated meat and dairy products that, if fed to livestock, will cause infection."

The U.S. has been free of this disease since 1929. While it is important to maintain vigilance in light of the European outbreak, it is also important to keep this in perspective.

I spent six years working on an agricultural missions project in Kenya in the early eighties. During those years, we had an outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the community about every two years. We were able to maintain a productive dairy herd with a vaccination program while the outbreaks would occur around us. The increased level of news coverage of the current outbreak conceals the fact that this disease has often been a problem in many parts of the world since 1929. However, the increased level of world trade and international travel by people from all nations has made the task of excluding disease much more difficult with each passing decade.

It is also important to note that routine use of the vaccines as done in Africa would have serious implications for our markets. The disadvantage of using vaccines is that one can no longer distinguish infected animals from clean animals, therefore sale of meat products and breeding stock to other nations is limited. Therefore, an aggressive program to exclude the disease is certainly warranted.

To Practice Biosecurity

To reduce the risk of an outbreak, dairy and livestock producers should maintain good biosecurity on their farms. "A good biosecurity plan is always an essential part of good farm management, but it's especially important now," said Griswold.

Producers should quarantine and observe new animals for at least four weeks before mixing them with their herds. If any animal displays excessive salivation or lameness associated with blisters of the mouth, nose, or feet — or other suspicious symptoms — producers immediately should contact their veterinarian, a state or federal veterinarian, or a county Penn State Cooperative Extension agent.

"Early recognition of warning signs and prompt notification of veterinary officials are vital for successful isolation and eradication of infected animals," said Griswold. "Fast action may prevent the disease from becoming established in the United States, or at least reduce the time, energy, and money needed to wipe it out."

Avoiding unnecessary travel to other livestock farms and excluding visitors from livestock farms is a good, common-sense practice.

The USDA has banned the import of all animals and animal products from the European Union. USDA and Customs Service inspectors at international airports and seaports are questioning travelers and inspecting cargo to prevent the importation of banned meats, cheeses, and other products that could contain the virus.

Travelers coming from countries where the disease exits are being asked to launder their clothing before returning to the U.S. The clothes and shoes of those who visited agricultural areas may be disinfected at the airport. "If you visit rural areas overseas, buy some comfortable but inexpensive clothes and shoes that you can leave behind before flying home," Griswold said. "Once back in the United States, refrain from visiting animal agriculture areas for at least 14 days."

The USDA has established a toll-free telephone center to respond to questions from the public, industry, and media regarding USDA's response to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Europe. The toll-free number is 1-800-601-9327. International callers can reach the center by dialing 01-301-734-9257.

For more information about foot and mouth disease, contact any Penn State Cooperative Extension county office, or visit the Web at http://fmd.cas.psu.edu.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE 'GOOD NEWS' ON THE ROAD

Background Scripture:
8:4-40.
Devotional Reading:
Micah 5:7-9.

While I do not think that God sends us hardship and persecution — it is easy enough to get that without divine intervention! — I never doubt that he can use them for his purposes.

The first clear explication of this idea is found in Genesis 50:20, where Joseph comforts the brothers who had sold him into slavery: "As for you, you meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, to bring it about that many people should be kept alive, as they are today." The sinful act was that of the brothers, but God was able to use their sinful act for his good purposes. He was able to make something good out of evil.

Living a life of faith is not so much being protected from misfortune and evil, as in learning to read it as an opportunity for God to reveal the Good News of Jesus Christ. Scholars have speculated as to what might have happened in the course of Christianity had the earliest disciples continued to live as a community in the midst of Jerusalem, instead of taking the gospel on the road. The inertia to stay where they were and enjoy their congregational life together might have been a powerful detriment to the spread of the gospel.

A Closed Door

After the stoning of Stephen, however, there was a dramatic change in their situation: "Devout men buried Stephen and made great lamentation over him. But Sail laid waste the church, and entering house after house, he dragged off men and women and committed them to prison" (4:2,3).

God was not the author of the turmoil that Sail unleashed on the church. Sail was able to do that without any divine help.

And this was no temporary, minor tribulation the church would experience at his hands. Many of the Jerusalem Christians were scattered into Judea and Samaria, so by the grace of God this tragedy was turned into an advantage for the gospel: "Now those who were scattered went about preaching the word" (4:5).

Samaria, if you will remember, was the home of those who were alienated from the Jews. Many of them had come to inhabit Samaria after the people of Israel were carried off into captivity. Although they presumed that they were worshipping the traditional God of Israel, they were a polyglot mixture of peoples. Jews and Samaritans despised each other, which is what made the parable of the Good Samaritan so poignant. The Samaritans were regarded as "the bad guys."

Yet, the Jerusalem persecution of Christians forced many to flee into Samaria, where they made the Good News available to the maligned Samaritans.

Without the persecution in Jerusalem, would Luke have been able to write: "Philip went down to a city of Samaria, and proclaimed to them the Christ" (4;5)? Saul was the catalyst for this wave of persecution, but it was God who shaped the end result.

Scandalized!

Keep in mind that the Jerusalem Christians still thought of themselves as Jews (albeit Jews who followed Jesus Christ) and we would expect that they would have been scandalized about the Samaritan mission. Instead, a great barrier began to crumble: "Now when the apostles at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent to them Peter and John, who came down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit" (4:14,15). In the midst of persecution, God broke down a wall between Jewish Christians and Samaritans — no small accomplishment!

Note that there were no angels sent to Sail to inspire his shameful violence against the church. The persecution came from Saul's misguided zeal. But an angel was sent to Philip: "Rise and go toward the south, to the road that goes down from Jerusalem to Gaza" (4:26). Having stirred Samaria, Philip was now to turn southward to another barrier that could represent another opportunity for the gospel.

When bad things happen in our lives and when doors seem slammed shut in our faces, let us remember that, for all the evil that caused this, it may be an opportunity for God to help us take the Good News on the road.

Switchgrass Provides Cattle Health Benefits

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Switchgrass can provide some good forage for grazing cattle, particularly beef according to one USDA ARS animal scientist. In one sample conducted before Ag Progress Days in Rocksprings last August, a forage analysis of the variety Cave In Rock provided 19 percent crude protein and a very vegetative NDF of 65 percent, according to Kathy Soder, USDA ARS soil scientist.

The switchgrass is very vegetative and quite palatable, Soder said.

Purebred Angus beef from Penn State looked good in body condition, noting from the pasture.

If producers want to use the warm season grasses on pastured beef, they still have to take a hard look at them, said Soder, to ensure the animals are doing well on pasture. That includes hip bones, rib cover and how well and how much the animals are feeding.

The past year was good with a has yield of 4.5 tons per acre. The switchgrass planted at Rockspring was five years old. Through in some spots it was sparse with some leaf blotch, one stand is 10 years old and still producing.

According to Jim Crupper, NRCS national forage management specialist, the switchgrass was established from a corn rotation. The switchgrass should be rotated back to corn after a time to kill any tall fescue or quackgrass that could emerge.

The switchgrass he said is very dominant and does well with its good moisture holding capacity. Graziers should have the animals take the grass down to about six inches of stubble.

The variety Cave In Rock was developed in Quicksand, Ky. Cave in Rock noted for its adaptability to growing conditions found in the East, especially the high humidity area. It gets best in year 3 or 4 age rainfall and temperature.

Don't Overgraze, According To Pasture Beef Producer

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Pasture beef producer Conrad Fisher recognized his worst enemy when it comes to grazing. I am my greatest enemy, he told about a dozen producers and agribusiness representatives the past summer at Ag Progress Days in Rocksprng. I didn't recognize when overgrazing was done.

During the drought of 1999 pastures were grazed down to far. But now the most beautiful color he said is green. After the drenching rains of Hurricane Floyd in September 1999 in 48 hours they came back green, he said. They did come back.

Fisher spoke at a Graziers Forum at Ag Progress Days in August in Rocksprng.

[illegible] using previous methods of caring for pastures and fields, didn't yield very well. The [illegible] noted that in recent years [illegible] back with high [illegible] high [illegible] forage for the dairy [illegible]. Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Dairy Market Outlook For 2001

Milk Supply

The market is showing signs of price strength because of a slowdown in the growth in the milk supply. Adjusted for an extra day for leap year in 2000, February 2001 milk production for 20 select dairy states was 11.2 billion pounds, down 0.9 percent.

January revised milk production, at 12.1 billion pounds, was down 1.6 percent. Production per cow in February for 20 select states averaged 1,440 pounds, down 66 pounds from a year ago. And, cow numbers for these states in February was 7.77 million head, 10,000 head less than January 2001.

The market is reflecting a tight milk supply. Buyers, commodity traders, and speculators are all betting that the milk supply will be tight this year and commodity prices will be much higher. That sentiment is reflected in the dairy futures prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME). As of March 29, 2001, the CME futures markets is expecting the Class III price of milk will rise from $11.39 per CWT in March to $13.36 per CWT by September. Likewise, the CME is expecting the Class IV price to rise from $13.50 per cwt in March to $$14.50 per CWT by September. These price increases represent significant changes relative to a year ago.

The outlook is for cow numbers to decline slightly the first two quarters of the year and then level out by the fourth quarter at 9.165 million cows. Total cow numbers are expected to decline just 0.4 percent (see Table 1). Milk per cow is expected to decline the first quarter of 2001, even with a year ago the second quarter, and then rebound the third and fourth quarters.

For the year, milk per cow will be up 0.9 percent. This implies that the milk supply will be down sharply the first quarter and then stage a rebound by the third and fourth quarter. For the year the milk supply will grow just 0.5 percent for 2001. That compares with a growth rate of 3.0 percent in 2000 relative to the previous year.

Demand And Ending Stocks

Demand for dairy products is expected to be impacted by a slowing U.S. economy. USDA has forecasted that the Gross Domestic Product (GDP), a measure of the strength of the U.S. economy, will grow just 2.2 percent in 2001. That compares with a growth rate of just over 5 percent in 2000. That will be offset by a slightly lower inflation rate and lower interest rates. The question is, how will this outlook affect demand for milk and dairy products?

Commercial disappearance of dairy products (milkfat basis) in 2000 grew at an annual rate of 2.6 percent. With a slowing economy it is expected that growth in demand for dairy products will be just 2.1 percent in 2001. This represents a conservative estimate based on an uncertain economic outlook and a gloomy stock market.

The impact of a dramatic slowdown in the growth of the U.S. milk supply coupled with

Weather Protect Weed Control for Top Yields

FIELD NOTES

Weather is one of the most important factors affecting weed control in corn today Dry, wet or cold weather can lead to erratic weed control, especially with soil-applied herbicides

Herbert Roos and Jim Campbell have taken steps to weather-protect their weed control by switching from inconsistent preemergence programs to using a planned post program with DuPont™ Basis Gold® herbicide They have seen their decision pay off in more reliable control of both grasses and broadleaves—as well as award-winning yields in the 2000 National Corn Yield Contest

Unlike soil-applied herbicides, Basis Gold® doesn't need rain to deliver burndown control of emerged grasses and broadleaves With a passing shower, the residual activity kicks in to control foxtails, waterhemp, giant ragweed, pigweeds, velvetleaf and lambsquarters, and helps keep fields clean through harvest When growers look at costs, Basis Gold® is up to $3 per acre less than the leading competitive program

"We have had real good luck with Basis Gold®," says Roos, a first-place yield winner in Illinois.

"It seems like the preplant treatments will play out, and then the waterhemp and foxtail come in late We haven't seen Basis Gold® run out, even in years with heavy rainfall"

Sandbur, lambsquarters and cocklebur are among the major weed problems for Campbell, who farms near Canton, Mo. Basis Gold® has proven itself effective and crop safe—something that Campbell notes is not always the case with a preemergence program

"I've had times with a pre-only program where we went two to three weeks without rain and it never activated. By the time we got rain, the weeds were too big to control," says Campbell, a third-place yield winner in Missouri "Basis Gold® doesn't affect the corn one bit We can spray corn four to ten inches tall, and it just keeps on growing It just does a fantastic job"

Dairy Of Distinction Highlights Well-Kept Dairies

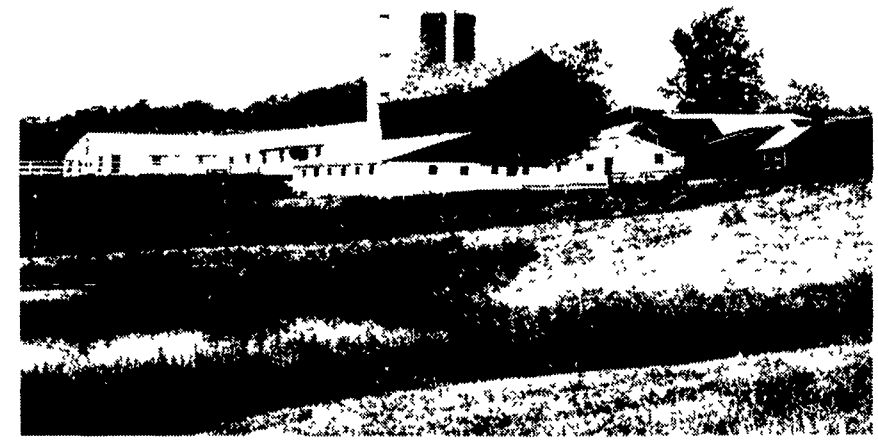
UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction Award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads, and lanes, and well-maintained fences They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals, the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management

Dairy of Distinction



Sterling Miller's Sons, Stroudsburg

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at MOConnor@das psu edu

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 750 dairy farms The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications

How Is Your Farm Scored?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy producers or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

How The Judging Works

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent of their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

Rules

1 The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP)
2 The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4"x4"x12' or iron pipe 2"x12' be used Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability
3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage
4 Signs shall not be moved to other premises New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5 Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee
6 No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses
7 The judges' decision will be final
8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31
9 Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30 If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign
10 Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee

Dairy of Distinction
2001 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18"x24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening Will help rumen function over freshing Less feet problems and less stress about and control of poultry diseases from avian influenza to salmonella, and others.

The theme of the banquet, Shirk said, is "Pennsylvania Poultry: A New Generation."

There are a lot of changes under way in the industry, Shirk said, and research and education programs "enhance the poultry industry in Pennsylvania."

Two new pilot programs include a cooperative initiative with the conservation district and the American Clean Water fund on environmental stewardship. The other program is a pilot program on an environmental management system with a focus on environmental issues.

Tickets for the banquet are $100 apiece and are still available. Contact Shirk at the Council, (717) 651-5920.

Evaluating Fields, Barnyards Necessary For Nutrient Management Plans

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — As part of the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Education Program, 19 agri-industry representatives attended a workshop here this week to learn about evaluating fields and barnyards for runoff control.

Conducted by Penn State Extension and the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), the workshop was conducted at the Dauphin County Agricultural Research Center and included visits to three area farms.

Farm visitations and classroom training are both essential for learning about the best management practices (BMP) that must be included in a nutrient management plan (NMP) as required by the Pennsylvania Nutrient Managment Act (referred to as "Act 6").

Tim Murphy, NRCS engineer, right, and Jerry Martin, Penn State extension nutrient management specialist.

Participants at Field Loss and Barnyard Evaluation Workshop in Dauphin County.

Teaching at the Dauphin County center Tuesday morning were Timothy J. Murphy, agricultural engineer from the Harrisburg NRCS office; Jerry Martin, Penn State extension specialist in nutrient management; and Joel Myers, state agronomist, Harrisburg NRCS.

Their instructing continued at "hands-on" farm tours Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning. They consider the farm visits very important to show the various manure runoff situations that exist in barnyards and fields.

In addition to the nutrient application to crops and the handling of excess manure, the regulations for Act 6 require management plans to address conservation-related areas.

The four conservation areas that need to be addressed in nutrient management plans are 1) manure storage facilities and areas; 2) animal concentration areas (ACAs); 3) field, cropland, and pasture runoff control; and 4) manure application restriction areas.

Murphy provided detail about what planners should consider when evaluating runoff control practices in ACAs. He discussed the management and existing conditions in the barnyard, such as the accumulation of manure, standing water, and the stocking rate (number of animals per square feet).

The site characteristics are as equally important, he said. They include the topography in and around the ACA, the soil cover or paving, roof runoff, area downslope, runoff controls, and the practices and facilities used to address nutrient rich runoff.

Worksheets have been prepared by conservation and extension personnel to assist in farm evaluations. Called "Pennsylvania Farm-A-Assist," the worksheets were developed using material from the University of Wisconsin and the University of Minnesota extension services and the National Farmstead Assessment System Program. The form and style of the Pennsylvania package was based on the Ontario (Canada) Environmental Farm Plan. Jerry Martin was one of the project coordinators.

Three worksheets used at the on-farm evaluations were Barnyard Conditions and Management, Milkhouse Waste Management, and Stream and Drainageway Management. The worksheets are intended only to provide general information and recommendations for farmers and will not be used to keep records. However, they may be shared with others who will help develop a resource management plan.

Agronomist Joel Myers showed slides and discusssed critical areas in controlling runoff. He also showed the video made by Steve Groff at Groff's Cedar Meadow Farm after Hurricane Floyd in September 1999. It showed how his no-till farming operation faired well in the face of a hurricane compared to other areas.

Myers explained the objectives of conservation practices and the development of BMPs to solve runoff problems.

New Regulations Proposed For Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs)

Douglas Beegle
Penn State Extension
Agronomy And Soils

The U.S. Environmental Protective Agency (EPA) is proposing changes in the regulations under the Clean Water Act (CWA) that will affect animal feeding operations (AFOs) across the U.S.

Under current regulations, large animal feeding operations with more than 1,000 animal units confined for more than 45 days per year are defined as Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs). Other animal feeding operations may be designated by EPA in the state as CAFOs even though they are under the 1,000-animal unit level.

All CAFOs are required by law to have a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit for their operations. The major requirement for an NPDES permit is a Comprehensive Nutrient Management Plan (CNMP).

In response to a lawsuit, EPA has determined that the current CAFO regulations are not adequately preventing water pollution. As a result, they are proposing significant changes in the regulations. These changes could have a very significant impact on animal agriculture in Pennsylvania.

Several of the key changes in the proposed regulation include:

• Changing the definition for a CAFO.

-Lowering the animal numbers required to define an AFO as a CAFO. The proposed definition would be based on animal numbers, not animal units.

-Including dry poultry operations in the definition.

-Including standalone immature swine and heifer operations in the definition.

• Requiring all AFOs to show why they do not need a permit rather than having EPA show why they need a permit.

• Adopting a new effluent guideline with a zero discharge requirement for swine, poultry, and veal CAFOs and 25-year, 24-hour storm discharge standard for dairy CAFO facilities.

• The land application area would now be part of the CAFO.

• Clarifying allowable stormwater discharge and proper agricultural practices for field application of manure.

• Establishing a 100-foot setback from surface water where no manure could be applied.

• Rates for land application of manure would be based on N and P.

• Proposing new requirements for recipients of excess manure from CAFOs.

• Requiring processors that have substantial operational control over contract growers to be co-permitted.

• Requiring that the NPDES permit be maintained until an operation is properly closed.

• Including discharge to groundwater through a direct hydrolical connection to surface water as part of the discharge covered by an NPDES permit.

• Increasing public access to permit information.

This is just a brief synopsis of the proposed changes in the AFO regulations. A short factsheet describing the proposed changes to this regulation and the regulation itself (406 pages) are available on the Web at www.epa.gov/owm/afos/rule.htm or calling EPA at (202) 260-7786. This proposal is open for public comment until May 14, 2001.

$1.5 Million Awarded In Sustainable Agriculture Grants

BURLINGTON, Vt. — The Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education program (Northeast SARE) recently awarded $1,570,128 to researchers in the Northeast who are exploring topics as diverse as browse for meat goats, the control of flea beetles, adding value to beach plums, and the use of composts to boost grape production.

Grants ranged from $4,320 to train farmers in enhanced marketing and business skills to $167,660 to develop a farmer-run research organization that will conduct on-farm demonstrations, multi-farm production trials, and field days. The average grant was $112,152. All grants address an aspect of agricultural sustainability, with an emphasis on projects that deliver benefits quickly to farmers across the region.

Northeast SARE is a competitive grants program funded by the USDA. The northeast region is made up of Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, West Virginia, Vermont, and Washington, D.C.

Mandatory Livestock Price Reporting Begins

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced this week the initiation of the livestock mandatory reporting program. In the past, all market news has been reported to USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service on a voluntary basis.

The mandatory program requires the reporting of market information by packers who annually slaughter an average of 125,000 cattle or 100,000 swine, or slaughter or process an average of 75,000 lambs.

Importers who annually import an average of 5,000 metric tons of lamb meat products are also required to report. Mandatory reporting will provide information on 80 to 95 percent of the volume of all cattle, boxed beef, slaughter hogs, sheep, lamb meat and imported lamb meat traded.

Packers and importers are required to report to USDA the details of all transactions involving purchases of livestock and imported boxed lamb cuts, and the details of all transactions involving domestic and export sales of boxed beef cuts, sales of domestic and imported boxed lamb cuts, and sales of lamb carcasses.

Market news reports that will be new under mandatory reporting include reports covering the prior day swine market; forward contract and formula marketing arrangement cattle purchases; packer-owned cattle and sheep information; sales and purchases of imported boxed lamb cuts; and live lamb premiums and discounts.

Since Feb. 26, AMS has been testing the electronic data collection and dissemination system prior to implementation with those packers and importers required to report.

VIRGINVILLE (Berks Co.) — The Berks County 4-H Dairy Banquet was held here recently at the Virginville Grange Hall. During the banquet, many 4-H'ers, coaches and leaders were honored for the work they did in 2000.

Two 4-H'ers were awarded for their hard work and dedication on different levels. The Charles D. Care Memorial Award was awarded to Melissa Harper for being the Rookie of the Year. The other top award presented was the Joyce Miller 4-H Career Advancement Award. This award was presented to Andrew Youse.

The Charles D. Care Memorial Award or "Rookie of the Year" award is to encourage first or second year 4-H diary members to work hard and participate in their clubs activities. Charlie was a milk truck driver who always supported the 4-H Dairy Program. The 2000 Rookie of the Year is Melissa Harper.

Two other 4-H members were also recognized as Rookie of the Year finalists. They were Jordan Rice who was nominated by Northern Berks 4-H Club and Brett Sattazahn who was nominated by Western Berks 4-H Dairy Club. Jordan is the son of Dave and Beth Rice of Kempton. Brett is the son of Kevin and Sherri Sattazahn of Womelsdorf.

Melissa, the daughter of Jim and Mary Harper of Fleetwood, is a member of the Eastern Berks 4-H Dairy Club. This past year, Melissa participated in all of her clubs' community service projects, participated in dairy bowl, and also entered the Berks County Holstein Club chain calf contest and won a calf. Melissa who does not come from a dairy farm, has been helping at a fellow 4-H'ers farm to show her parents that she is serious about 4-H. Since joining 4-H, she has learned what chores need to be done to take care of her animals and has learned how to milk cows.

The Joyce Miller 4-H Career Advancement Award was established to recognize an outstanding Berks County 4-H Dairy club member. Joyce, was a dedicated 4-H leader who stressed hard work, service and achievement with her members. This award is given to 4-H members who are over the age of 17 and will use the award for higher education, career training or career investment.

4-H Members Honored

Andrew Youse, the winner of the 2000 Joyce Miller 4-H Career Advancement Award, is the son of Paul and Linda Youse of Oley. Andy has been a member of the Eastern Berks 4-H Dairy Club since the age of eight. Throughout his years in 4-H, Andy attributes 4-H leaders and speakers for giving him new ideas which he is using on his family's farm. Andy said that his 4-H dairy projects have made him more aware of the dairy industry and the need for good farmers and herdsmen. He is going to use the award towards the purchase of a mixer wagon. He feels that this purchase will help increase production in his herd.

Project book awards were presented to: Large herd — Jacob Rice (Northern Berks), Megan Schantz (Eastern Berks), and Jill Vail (Western Berks). Small herd — Jordan Rice (Northern Berks), George Brown (Eastern Berks), and Kellie Phillips (Eastern Berks). The judge for the project books was Steve Dietrich, Extension Agent in Chester County.

Dairy Herd Journal awards were presented to: Large herd — Melissa Schuler (Eastern Berks), Brett Treichler (Eastern Berks), and Brandon Treichler (Eastern Berks). Small herd — Brittany Treichler (Eastern Berks), Marisa Koinski (Northern Berks), and Jesse Bitler (Eastern Berks). The judge for the herd journals was Helene Dreisbach, former Berks County 4-H Dairy Leader.

Officer Book Awards were presented to: Secretary's Book — Adam Moyer (Western Berks), Treasurer's Book — Lucinda Bray (Western Berks), and Scrapbook — Megan Schantz (Eastern Berks).

During the banquet, many other 4-H members were recognized for their participation in events and programs throughout the 2000 4-H year. Also, Lucinda Bray, Berks County dairy princess, presented her skit.

Other program participants were Brandon Treichler, toastmaster; Andrew Youse, invocation; Trisha Geist and Jill Vail, pledges; Deborah Dietrich, 4-H coordinator; and Linda Youse, 4-H dairy council president.

Farm Bureau Rallies To Reduce Inheritance Tax

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The leader of a statewide farm organization has voiced support for legislative efforts to reduce Pennsylvania's inheritance tax.

Guy Donaldson, president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, stated the organization's support April 2 during a news conference conducted by state Representative Kerry Benninghoff.

House Bill 236, sponsored by Benninghoff, would reduce the state inheritance tax from 4.5 percent to 3 percent.

"State inheritance taxes harshly impact the financial ability of farm families to pass farm businesses between generations," Donaldson said at the news conference.

Farm Bureau policy recommends total elimination of the state inheritance tax, or exemptions of $1.3 million for estates passing farm ownership and $1 million for all other estates.

Farm Bureau also recommends that active farms in the farmland preservation program should be exempt from the inheritance tax if the farm is passed on to a family member.

"A family's farm is the basic ingredient in any retirement program, and many times are the major components of a successful business for the next generation. Pennsylvania state inheritance tax can destroy both plans," said Donaldson.

"For a farm family preparing to pass the farm on to the next generation, money must either be put into insurance premiums in order to have enough cash on hand to pay the tax at the time of transfer, or else part of the farm's capital investment of land, equipment, and buildings must be sold off to pay the tax bill," Donaldson explained. "Either way, it's a losing situation for farm families. If land must be sold to pay the inheritance tax, the next generation is left with a farm that is less productive and less able to survive in the future."

One of the services Pennsylvania Farm Bureau offers its members is a legal service with farm experience in estate planning. Farm Bureau's Legal Service Plan has proven that the state inheritance tax takes a much larger bite out of a farm family's wealth than the federal estate tax.

"As a farm family, you can reduce your federal tax liability through prudent estate planning, but nothing short of giving away all your assets before your death can be done to reduce the state's inheritance tax," Donaldson said. "There are no exemptions or exceptions."

Of 23 estates settled by the Farm Bureau Legal Service Plan from 1995 through 1999, only one required payment of federal estate taxes while nine estates had to pay Pennsylvania's inheritance tax. The total amount paid in federal estate taxes was a little over $62,000, and the total tab for state inheritance taxes topped $140,000 for the nine estates.

"Reduction of Pennsylvania's inheritance tax would help improve the economic vitality of our farmers," Donaldson said.

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

ROOTWORM PRODUCT PERFORMANCE
Del Voight, CCA
Extension Agent
Integrated Pest Management
Lebanon County

We know that rootworm adults seek cornfields in the fall to lay next year's eggs. Although there is discussion about the possibility of adults laying eggs in soybeans, this has not been documented to date in Pennsylvania.

This fact leads to the use of insecticides applied on or in the row for protection from rootworm larvae when grower's rotation consists of corn planted to corn.

Scouting thresholds exist for fall observance of rootworm adults by field, but the process is time-consuming and is seldom completed by growers in the capitol region. If one fails to determine the adult female population in the fall, a preventive treatment is recommended in spring to avoid rootworm feeding on corn roots.

The rootworm eggs lay dormant until usually the last week of May or the first week of June, depending on temperature. Most products will provide control for two to three weeks, depending on moisture and other external factors.

This fact points to some poor performance of insecticides when growers plant in mid-April and expect control from rootworm insecticides in late May more than three weeks of control. These early-planted fields may be candidates for a post treatment to manage rootworms.

The fact remains that most corn is planted the first week of May, which in these cases in row or T-bank applications of insecticide, will provide adequate control.

Land O'Lakes Returns Cash To Members

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Members who attended Land O'Lakes Unit meetings held across the Mid-Atlantic region in March received checks for the cash portion of their Land O'Lakes dairy member patronage. The cooperative's solid performance in 2000 enabled Land O'Lakes to returned $54.3 million in cash to members.

"Sales increased more than three percent to $5.8 billion," said Chuck Cruickshank, director of procurement, member relations and transportation for Land O'Lakes. "Earnings were up from $21.4 million in 1999 to $102.9 million in 2000."

Cruickshank reviewed Land O'Lakes strategic direction and its accomplishments in 2000. Dairy Foods members received 71.4 cents per hundredweight in patronage from Land O'Lakes 2000 business performance.

"Land O'Lakes continues its commitment to performance, and producers are benefiting from that commitment," Cruickshank said. "Since Land O'Lakes came to the Mid-Atlantic region in 1997, we have returned $1.39 per hundredweight in Land O'Lakes profits to our Dairy Foods members in the East."

The Land O'Lakes corporate board directors from the Mid-Atlantic region reported on Land O'Lakes efforts to create value for its members. Those directors included Gordon Hoover, Gap; Charles Schilling, Petersburg; Ken Schoenberg, Shippensburg; and Robert Winner, Moorestown, N.J.

"Ownership in our cooperative gives us greater opportunity through participating in earnings and benefiting from Land O'Lakes member services," Hoover said. "By participating in a value-added market with the Land O'Lakes brand, we have more access to the consumer and can increase our share of the earnings."

New delegates were elected during the meetings. The cooperative also honored quality award and membership award winners. In the Mid-Atlantic area, more than 180 producers received quality awards for achieving quality premiums all 12 months in 2000.

Forty-five producers in the Mid-Atlantic region were honored with membership awards.

PASS To Measure Acreage And Yields

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — What are the crops going to yield in 2001? Each crop season is started with blind expectations. In Pennsylvania, the final yield for grain corn in 2000 was 127 bushels per acre, up 57 bushels per acre when compared to 1999. For soybeans, the 2000 yield, up almost 50 percent more than 1999's yield, was estimated at 43 bushels per acre. For small grains, the final estimates for wheat and barley stood at 53 and 71 bushels per acre, respectively. The information just mentioned are a few examples of the statistics that are produced from our monthly agricultural yield survey. The yield survey allows a monthly tracking of production based on conditions at the first of each month.

The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS) will once again be conducting its yearly Agricultural Yield Survey starting in May with questions on winter wheat plantings, yield and hay stocks and finishing in November with final corn and soybean yields. This monthly survey will begin at the start of each month for seven months. As with all surveys conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), individual operator information is kept strictly confidential and are used only with other reports to establish county and state level statistics.

Farmer responses to the ag yield surveys are used to generate state and national yield production forecasts for major field crops. Production forecasts give an important advance warning of the size of each crop in Pennsylvania and across the nation. In addition, contract harvesters, transportation companies and storage facilities have advance notice to prepare to handle a large volume. Or in the case of a small crop, our ag yield report warns about the possible need to plan for alternate livestock feed sources or farmer assistance programs such as the 1999 Drought Assistance Program.

Results of this survey will be released from Washington, D.C. The survey results will be sent to anyone requesting the information in the Keystone Ag Digest. This is a bi-monthly publication and will be received within a few weeks of the actual release date. Reports may be obtained on the actual release dates via the Internet at http://www.usda.gov/nass.

PDA Announces Restrictions On Imported Used Farm Equipment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced April 3 an immediate restriction on the importation of all used farm equipment from countries that have confirmed cases of Foot and Mouth Disease. The action is part of a ban by the United States Department of Agriculture's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS) for every state.

"It is very important that we plug every hole that could allow the flow of Foot-and Mouth Disease into Pennsylvania," Secretary Hayes said. "That's the proper public policy at this time. These are unusual times, so we cannot do business as usual."

The countries affected by the restrictions are the member nations of the European Union (EU). All used farm equipment currently en route to the United States from Foot-and-Mouth Disease countries will be allowed entry after being thoroughly inspected, cleaned and disinfected.

In response to the recent Foot-and-Mouth Disease outbreak, the Agriculture Department is working closely with USDA-APHIS, farmers and industry representatives to protect state borders. The Department of Agriculture continues to review all programs and procedures to ensure ongoing prevention and readiness against Foot-and-Mouth Disease.

On March 29, Secretary Hayes met with the USDA-APHIS at its headquarters in Riverdale, Md., to discuss the Foot-and-Mouth Disease concerns in the United States.

For more information on Foot-and-Mouth Disease, contact the state veterinarian at (717) 787-6677, or visit the Department of Agriculture through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

HAKARI ALASKA BROMEGRASS
Great Drought Tolerance! Fast Establishment

Hakari Brome offers late maturity (later than orchardgrass) and fast establishment making it a good choice for mixing in old or new stands of alfalfa. It is very palatable which makes it good for grazing, especially in drier areas. Hakari is a key ingredient in our Highland Haygrazing Mixture. It is tall non creeping with broad leaves. Hakari is easy to mow and dry. Higher digestability than orchardgrass! In situ forage anaylsis in fall of '99 showed TDN of 90 for Hakari, 76 for orchardgrass, and 91 for ryegrass. Livestock Merchandizing Course Prepares To 'Focus On The Future'

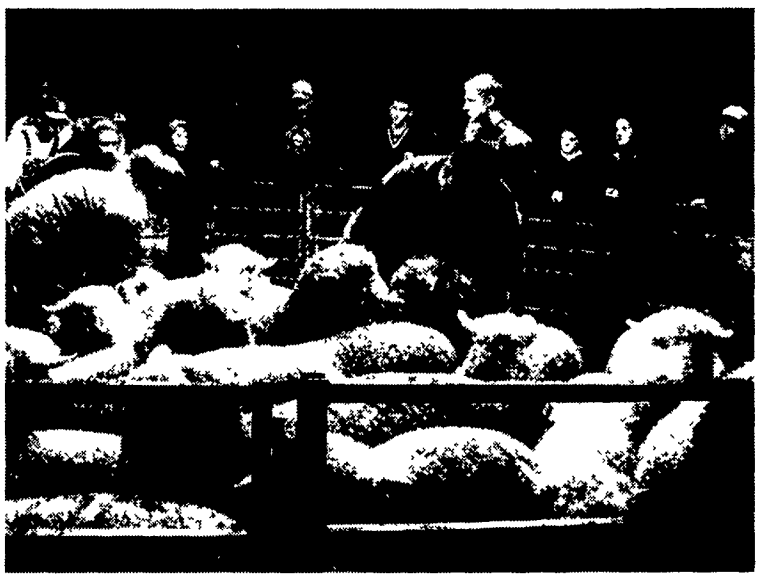
UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — This spring, Penn State students can pursue their interests in livestock marketing through a course, "Animal Science 297B: Purebred Livestock Merchandizing."

The course is co-instructed by Dr. Keith A. Bryan, instructor in animal science, and Dr. Erskine H. Cash, professor of animal science.



A Penn State student sorts through a group of Polled Dorset lambs in preparation for the "Focus On The Future" Sale.

Patterned after courses taught previously by Cash and in conjunction with Penn State's Angus sales, this year's course features the planning and execution of Penn State's first Polled Dorset Production Sale.

In order to appreciate fully the complexities of preparing for a production sale, the course instructors employ many teaching techniques and guest speakers on various topics. Keith Evans, an authority on purebred livestock advertising and former director of communications and public relations for the American Angus Association, spoke to the class on two different occasions.

The first lesson provided students with the subtle differences between excellent and poor advertisements in breed publications. Following his talk, students were required to develop an advertisement for their own "fictional" purebred livestock production sale.

A few weeks later, Evans provided a constructive critique of the ads the students had developed and suggestions for improvement. Darrell Anderson, past president of the National Suffolk Sheep Association, auctioneer and sheep show judge, and CEO of the National Swine Registry, visited with the group about the role of purebred livestock breed associations in marketing and merchandizing purebred livestock.

Mixed among the guest speakers were required work sessions at the Penn State Sheep Barn, where students focused on sheep selection and management. Students identified and sorted the fall-born ram and ewe lambs to be offered in the sale, prepared the facilities for visitors, and weighed sheep for production records.

Bryan provided the students with extended pedigrees for all of the reference sires represented in the sale offering and described the show ring, performance, and production successes of the various sire groups. Additionally, he expanded the discussion to include relationships among sires and those to other notable stud rams in the Polled Dorset breed.

As the sale date draws near, other guest lecturers include William MacCauley, sheep sale auctioneer and purebred Suffolk breeder, talking about the role of the auctioneer in merchandizing, and Ronald Miller, director of agricultural fairs for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, who will address specifics regarding importation and exportation of livestock.

Penn State's "Focus On The Future" Sale will be conducted at the Ag Arena April 28 at 1

The situation in England provides lessons to learn for the U.S. More than one million cattle, sheep, and pigs have already been slaughtered in the United Kingdom, according to Dr. Thomas Smith, professor of epidemiology and public health at the college of veterinary medicine, University of Pennsylvania. Smith came to America from England in 1986.

Projected minimum number of infected operations is 900, with a maximum of four to five thousand farms before the outbreak is under control. The cost is about $400 million per month, which covers control of the disease, feeding quarantined animals, and financial loss to food processors who face curtailed supply.

This does not take into consideration the decreased tourist industry, the end of exports, and property tax relief.

In answer to a lawmaker's questions, Smith said that, unfortunately, vaccination does not appear to be the answer. Europe, in fact, phased out FMD vaccination in 1991. The vaccination remains viable for four to six months, and some animals remain susceptible during that time.

Additionally the vaccine is made from killed virus, but some lots may have the live virus also infecting animals.

"It is impossible to determine between the vaccine and a positive animal," noted Smith. Genetic vaccines, which researchers are now investigating, may be of greater value, said Dr. John Enck, VMD, USDA Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services director.

Seven strains of the disease and 60 subtypes also make this disease difficult to control with a vaccine.

Consequently a vaccinated animal cannot be sent to other countries. The best option remains, therefore, to "maintain by surveillance and quarantine," he said, "just by recognizing and containing the disease. It's a gamble. For the U.S. the gamble has paid off for 70 years, for Canada 50 years, and for 20 years in Britain."

Consequently, lawmakers discussed how to keep the odds in America's favor to continue the "gamble." In 1999 alone, 400 million travelers came to the U.S. from abroad, and 16.4 percent of them were direct flights from Great Britain.

Two to three percent of these travelers carried foodstuffs that could carry FMD. Shoes and clothing may also harbor the disease.

Legislators questioned the veterinarians on the possibility of wildlife either being a reservoir or even just passing the disease on from an infected farm. Domestic, rather than wild, animals are more at risk.

"The key to containment and eradication is recognizing the disease early and killing animals on the day of diagnosis," said Smith. "Infected animals, especially pigs, breath out gigantic quantities of disease. You can't waste any time."

Pennsylvania Response

Pennsylvania has its own action plans ready for emergency response, said Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes. Financially, he said, the state is ready. "We do have appropriations for emergency response. I am satisfied that we can continue our action plan without added appropriations."

The virus can be easily carried in air currents over a large number of miles, said Hayes, putting at risk animals downwind, a trait not true of every virus. The protocol in the United Kingdom is that animals within two miles of an infected site are depopulated.

Human population controls are not the first measure of curtailing the disease. "Serious population controls would be put in place incrementally," said Hayes. Currently, the upcoming fair season and agriculture expositions are slated to continue, but will be shut down in the event of an outbreak.

As far as exchange students or delegations, Hayes said that research to find out where the people are from and their travel plans "already has a chilling impact on projecting Pennsylvania products around the planet.

"Be it trade missions or be it exchange students, we have to put up as many fences as we can in a thoughtful, balanced way."

The U.S. depends on the honesty of travelers, said Dr. Lynn Siegfried, DVM, Pennsylvania veterinarian in charge. According to their answers, the necessary disinfections of people entering the country takes place.

Screening personnel at airports has been added by PDA to augment the USDA personnel, which has also been increased, said Hayes.

Anyone entering the country is asked to refrain from visiting a farm for five days, "well in excess of when the virus is present," said Enck. The virus is killed by detergent and hot water, so a bath and washing of clothing and shoes should decontaminate a carrier.

The virus needs organic material and moisture to live, and is sensitive to pH. In an environment with a pH below six or above 11, it will burst open and be destroyed, he said. Clorox will also kill the virus.

"We cannot move too rapidly in eradicating infected animals," said Hayes. Prospective burn or burial sites are now being identified, although preferably the animals would not be transported to a new area, risking disease spread.

According to Dr. Smith, "in many outbreaks across the world, burial is the traditional method used to dispose of the carcasses. There are very few options open to us. The decision you make is an economic one, based on manpower and materials available."

Besides site surveying, to increase speed of response, Hayes has an emergency proclamation already drafted that the governor is prepared to sign in case of infections. "As soon as we know of an infection, we will quarantine the area an the animals will go down. We will move with dispatch," said Hayes.

"The trick is to catch it and deal with it on-farm. If you can do that, you'll be fine. Fifty percent of the outbreaks involve one to two farms. These large outbreaks are uncommon," said Smith.

"You have to act rapidly, indeed," said Smith. "The virus can be spread before it is recognized. You should use every resource you have available to help you act quickly."

Hayes stressed the speed of the process which will put quarantine and slaughter measures in place to protect healthy livestock. "We want to use judicious decision-making processes, but we will have to move with dispatch."

According to Hayes producers would be compensated fair market value for the loss of their animals. A program is now underway to determine the number for fair market value.

Understandably, many facets of the industry would be affected by the onslaught of FMD. "I don't know how we would deliver products with an outbreak of foot and mouth disease, to ensure the biosecurity of everyone else involved." said Scott Hodgson, sales and nutrition manager, Cumberland Valley Cooperative.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE)

"We never have had, and do not now have, a case of BSE in the United States," said Hayes. He also mentioned the stringent protocols in place to ensure the disease does not reach America.

According to Dr. Nanette Hanshaw-Roberts, a veterinarian with the Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services in Pennsylvania, BSE is known for its long incubation period.

An animal can have the disease for four to five years before symptoms appear and the disease is diagnosed.

A fatal degenerative brain disease, BSE is contracted by the animal consuming infected ruminant offal. The disease was first diagnosed in 1986 in England.

In the U.S., plant sources of protein such as soybeans are more readily available, so including animal proteins, such as the practice in England, was not as common.

Today a ruminant feed ban is in place in the U.S.

There is also a ban on importing live animals and animal products from countries with BSE. In addition the USDA continues to test possible BSE-suspect animals.

BSE causes proteins to change shape to abnormal, misshapen "Prion proteins," which the body cannot rid itself of. The proteins cause damage to the nervous tissue. The disease causes brain tissue to look like a sponge under the microscope, thus the descriptive name, "spongiform."

People cannot get BSE but can get the transmissible spongiform encephalopathies (TSE), in the same class of illnesses. The "new variant Creutzfeldt Jacob" disease occurs at a annual rate of one to two cases per million people. The TSE cases were reported in England.

An animal with BSE would be apprehensive, occasionally aggressive, head shy, hold their head low, have a high stepping gait, especially the back legs, have difficulty getting up, skin tremors, and lose condition, weight, or milk yield.

There is no evidence that it can spread between live animals, said Roberts. Experts are studying whether blood or blood products can transmit the disease. In addition stringent AI regulations ensure the disease is not passed on through that pathway, even though authorities have not established that BSE can be transmitted via AI.

The USDA has placed import restrictions on live animal and protein products from Europe. In addition the FDA places feed restrictions on producers and surveys slaughter plants for the disease. The FDA also ensures that the tissue of every animal with neurological problems is tested.

Ag Department Issues Plum Pox Planting Restrictions Reminder

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr. recently reminded residents and business owners of a moratorium on the planting of plum pox virus-susceptible trees or shrubs in the plum pox virus quarantine zones in Adams and Cumberland counties.

The moratorium covers all of Dickinson Township, South Middleton Township, and Mount Holly Springs in Cumberland County. In Adams County, the area affected is Huntington Township, Latimore Township, York Springs, the northern portion of Tyrone Township, and the eastern portion of Menallen Township.

The moratorium includes residential or business plantings, as well as new plantings in commercial orchards.

Plum pox virus is an extremely serious threat to the stone fruit industry of Pennsylvania. Commercial growers have destroyed about 900 acres of infected and exposed trees to help eradicate the plum pox virus.

"Everyone needs to work together in the quarantine zone — commercial growers, backyard fruit growers, homeowners, renters, and businesses — to help eradicate this fruit-tree disease from Pennsylvania," Hayes said.

The planting of plum pox virus-susceptible trees in the quarantine area would provide new hosts for virus infection and increase the time needed to eradicate the virus. The Bureau of Plant Industry at the Department of Agriculture has worked with the residents and business owners in quarantine area, conducting surveys to test for the plum pox virus and assisting landowners with questions and concerns.

"The reliability of Mid-Atlantic's parts department, makes them worthy of my recommendation."

– Dwayne Myers

"Our dairy farm has been in business for the past 50 years. We started buying our manure handling equipment from Mid-Atlantic AgriSystems about 12 to 15 years ago. We buy all of our manure tanks and agitator pumps from them and have been pleased with our purchases of Houle equipment, one of the best manufacturers on the market. I have remained a Mid-Atlantic customer over the years partly because of their high integrity, which I believe to be important in a company, but mainly for the high quality and value of the products they sell. The reliability of their parts department, as well, makes them worthy of my recommendation."

Calving Season Demonstrates

This unusual breed, however, is not an exotic or newly-introduced breed. The British White Park cattle do, however, have an interesting history.

According to Website information, the cattle, which for 700 years were regarded as wild game animals, were hunted in England. During the 12th and 13th centuries, kings gave large land grants to the church — "parks" — which were fenced in to exclude poachers and control the game animals inside.

Until 1800 the cattle lived inside the parks, becoming prized possessions and status symbols, and were bequeathed to the owner's descendants. Consequently, distribution of the breed was kept to a mimimum.

During World War II, Churchhill ordered that all crops and cattle were to be eliminated if the Germans invaded England. In response the British White Park breeders shipped five females and one bull to the U.S. to preserve the breed. Today breeders are concentrated in Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa.

Here In Pennsylvania

British White Park breeder Glenn Wenger, Myerstown, first learned about the cattle through a 1993 article published in Lancaster Farming. The animals are housed on his parent's home farm, a former dairy operation, nearby. Glenn is also the president of "Wengers of Myerstown," a family owned and operated farm and construction equipment business.

"I always loved cattle," said Wenger, who raised, bred, and sold Holstein springers, "but I never had any calves around. I wanted calves around so I set out to find a beef breed. I was looking for something different and unique."

After reading the article he contacted the breed association, talked to other breeders, and then attended the national sale in Missouri in February 1994.

The trip proved to be profitable, as Wenger came home with four heifers and a bull from that sale, plus an additional five heifers from a producer in Indiana which he purchased during the same trip.

"The reason they caught my attention is, number one, their temperament; number two, their calving ease; and number three, their uniqueness;" said Wenger.

Wenger quickly found, however, another benefit: other White Park breeders. "After I got involved, I learned that the people in the association are great to work with. It's a very easygoing group of people. Everybody pitches in and helps each other. It's a friendly competition. Developing relationships is more important than winning when it's all over," he said.

The first calves arrived in 1995 and "we've just been slowly growing from there. This year we're calving out 23 cows. That's about where we want to be.

Entering The Show Ring

The heifers were traditionally kept as replacements while the steers were sold as freezer beef. Recently the show ring circuit, however, has attracted Wenger, so cattle are also sold as club calves or kept for the show ring.

"The last two years we began showing," said Wenger. His two year old heifer, "Mytown Jackie" was the national grand champion female in Louisville, Ky., last year. He also took cattle to Quincy, Ill. last year, which he is planning to do again this July. He is tentatively planning to take animals to the World Beef Expo in Milwaukee the end of September.

"Last year was the first White Park show at KILE (Keystone International Livestock Exposition), and we had a tremendous amount of interest there. What helped generate that interest was that a White Park calf was the grand champion club calf."

This year four breeders, from Pennsylvania, Indiana and New York. exhibited 22 animals at the show. The breed's 2001 annual meeting and board meeting will take place at KILE this year, said Wenger, who hopes that the location will draw competition from further reaches and interest producers in becoming breeders.

A display at the Farm Show, which included not only a table with information but also one of Wenger's bulls, also helped to disseminate information.

"I would expect several calls in the next month or two as pastures are coming on, to hear from the contacts we made during the Farm Show," he said.

Younger show ring participants are also attracted to the cattle, said Wenger. "4-H and FFA'ers also like, and take pride in, something a little different," he said.

Wenger is anticipating watching the calves, which were sold to exhibitors in five nearby counties, enter the ring as club calves this year.

The breed is known for its high fertility, calving ease, and maternal instincts. Cows often remain in herds until they are 15 or 16 years old.

The calves weigh about 70 pounds at birth.

Breed Characteristics

"One thing I really like about the cattle as much as anything is that they are just a pleasure to work with, with their temperament. They'll have a place in niche markets for something good for kids to work with."

Their characteristic dark pigment aids in not only identifying them but also decreasing eye problems or wind or sun or sand burn on the udders. Another benefit to the breed is that anyone interested in British White Park cattle can get in business with a good purebred animal for lower financial outlay than other breeds, said Wenger.

"You can get a good purebred heifer fresh off the cow to take to shows at $800. Of course this can go up or down according to bloodlines and quality."

The high-fertility cows, which Wenger breeds by live cover, carry ample milk for the calves, which are born at an average of 70 pounds. "They make great mothers," he said.

Even when the cattle are crossbred with other breeds, the "white can be pretty dominant," said Wenger. The breed does not yet have expected progeny difference (EPD) statistics.

Wenger is in contact with breeders in Pennsylvania and New York. Besides himself, Wenger knows of four other breeders in Pennsylvania.

Beef For Today's Industry

Although he would like to do more research and record keeping, Wenger also believes the animals are "efficient as far as converting. The best testament to the meat quality is the last two years, the butcher we use ended up putting a White Park into his freezer," he said. "It's tender, marbled well, and we always have repeat buyers."

Carcass data shows an average of a 13.5 square inch ribeye, 93 percent Yield Grade 1 and 2, a backfat thickness of .27 inches, 86 percent grade Choice, and a hot weight of 705 pounds.

"Something the breed is struggling with is that some people would like to see more black in the cattle. We want to stay distinctive and breed cattle that can win shows, regardless of hide color."

In making breeding decisions, Wenger "is looking to put thickness on cattle" which leads to his excitement over showing "Mytown Kicker," a one-year-old bull calf, this year.

"I want to keep the size cattle we have today," said Wenger. "These cattle will finish out at 1,250 pounds, which fits well into what commercial packers are looking for. I don't want to change the breed, or go through cycles with these cattle.

"They're a low-maintenance animal that does extremely well on grass. They don't take a lot of grain to finish."

The cattle are housed on Wenger's parents' farm, comprising 220 acres. Half of the acreage is rented out and the other half is kept for hay and pasture. The cattle are fed high-moisture baylage.

On his own property Wenger and his wife, Robin, keep three Norwegian Fjord horses. Robin competes in combined driving competitions in other states with the horses.

To find additional information, check the breed's web address at www.amer-britishwhitepark.org.

This time of year is calving season in Myerstown for the White Park herd. "They make great mothers," said Wenger.

Over the years, the Penn State flock has enjoyed tremendous success under the watchful eyes of Dick Kuzemchak, shepherd at the facility since 1971. With the help of newly hired Assistant Shepherd Laurie Bero, enthusiastic students, and sheep facility coordinator Dr. Keith A. Bryan, the group is striving to have this production sale serve several purposes.

"In addition to generating interest and excitement about the purebred sheep program at Penn State, the sale will bring together friends of the department, serve as a means to promote purebred livestock at Penn State, and facilitate the theoretical and hands-on transfer of marketing and merchandizing skills to students in the Livestock Merchandizing course," said Bryan.

In planning for this event, a few significant changes with the sheep flock occurred during the past year. Penn State assembled some of their very best rams and ewes for the summer and fall show season. The flock successfully competed at the Ohio and Indiana State Fairs, Eastern States Exposition, and the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), where they garnered numerous accolades.

A significantly greater number of Penn State brood ewes lambed this past fall than in the spring lambing season, compared to previous years. More than 240 lambs were born this fall at Penn State and will provide the majority of the lots cataloged for the sale.

The sale will feature all of the ewes from Penn State's undefeated and national champion show flock.

The sheep will be available for inspection Friday, April 27, at the Ag Arena or at the Penn State Sheep Barn prior to the sale. The Penn State Block and Bridle Club will serve a complimentary lunch on sale day, and a block of rooms has been reserved at the Hampton Inn (814) 231-1590. Simply ask for the "Penn State Dorset Sale."

Bill Proposes First Ever AgriDevelopment Zones In New York State

ALBANY, N.Y. — Assembly agriculture committee chair, Bill Magee (D-Nelson) has introduced legislation to create the first ever AgriDevelopment Zones in New York State in a continuing effort to help the family farmer.

"We have thousands of small businesses across the state in our farms that are the lifeblood of our rural communities and we must, as a state, make a commitment to their survival," Magee commented.

The bill would create a total of 10 AgriDevelopment Zones statewide within three years with the first being created in a yet to be specified area in Oneida County. The Zones would be limited in size to six towns within one county and could provide benefits such as low cost electric, wage and benefit subsidies for farm employees, equipment and technology grants, marketing assistance and low interest loans as well as a variety of tax incentives.

"Just as Empire Zones offer assistance to industrial and manufacturing companies in mainly urban areas, so it should also be the public policy of this state to offer similar assistance to farms and farmers throughout rural New York," Magee said.

"While the creation of AgriDevelopment Zones will have an immensely positive effect on our local and state economies, this is more than an economic issue, it is also an environmental issue because by helping farmers survive and thrive, we are also preserving the rural character of upstate as well as millions and millions of acres of farmland and open space," Magee emphasized.

Devon Horse Show Tickets Now Available

DEVON (Chester Co.) — The Devon Horse Show and Country Fair will take place May 24 to June 2. Proceeds benefit the Bryn Mawr Hospital. The ticket office is now open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

For the very first time in the United States, as well as for the first time outdoors, Carriage Racing will be competed at Devon.

Carriage Racing is an offshoot of combined driving, in which four-in-hand drivers compete over a simulated cross country course in a ring. It will take place as an exhibition on Sun., May 27, Mon., May 28 and Tues., May 29.

Gene Sheninger of Boontown, N.J., will give an exhibition of border collies herding ducks on Fri., June 1 and Sat., June 2.

The Handy Hunter class for the regular working hunters has been, since its inception a few years ago, by far the most popular class for hunter spectators, and this year junior hunters will also have a Handy class on their schedule.

Junior Weekend, Thurs., May 24 through Sat., May 26, is sponsored by BET on Jazz and includes pony hunters, junior hunters and junior jumpers, with special events including hunt teams and a family class.

The Carriage Pleasure Drive on Sun., May 27, is judged first at St. David's Church, after which the carriages travel over the roads leading to Devon, a parade traditionally watched by local residents from picnic tables on their front lawns. Final judging begins at 2 p.m. in the Dixon Oval.

Monday through Wednesday features green, working, green conformation and regular conformation hunter classes, and amateur owners and local hunters compete the final Friday and Saturday.

Evening sessions Sunday through Thursday open with a jumper class, with the featured $50,000 Devon Grand Prix on Thursday evening. Jumps conclude the evening sessions Friday and Saturday, which features the $35,000 Idle Dice Stake. Three- and five-gaited, hackney and harness classes as well as four-in-hand coaching are competed nightly.

Breeding classes take over the Dixon Oval on Thurs., May 31. Other features include side saddle classes on Wednesday and pony breeding classes on Thurs., May 24.

The Country Fair includes boutique shopping daily, with jewelry, fine art, sporting clothes and much more offered in the area adjacent to the Dixon Oval.

For the kiddies, there's the Ferris wheel, merry-go-round rides and games of all types, and there's delicious food ranging from gourmet dining at the cafeteria to hamburgers, hot dogs and the famous Devon fudge.

General admission is $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and $4 for seniors over 65. Reserved seating is available. Call for ticket prices. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the ticket office at the show grounds or call (610) 688-2554.

50th National Highland Convention Set

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The American Highland Cattle Association (AHCA) will hold its 50th Annual National Convention on May 3-6 in Harrisburg.

Special activities will include a show with over 100 animals, a performance tested bull and select heifer sale and many hands-on educational workshops.

On Thursday and Friday, May 3-4, Highland enthusiasts will be treated to educational seminars encompassing collection and utilization of performance data, a carcass competition and farm tour. On Sat., May 5, everyone is invited to the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex to watch the MAHA Spring Classic show. Over 100 Highland cattle from around the U.S. and Canada will compete in this prestigious event.

After the show, the Performance Tested Bull and Select Heifer Sale will begin at 4 p.m. The sale will consist of "graduates" of the MAHA/NEHCA Bull Test. These bulls will have finished a 140 day feed test, passed a breeding soundness exam and have complete performance and ultrasound data.

Both the bulls and heifers in the sale will be halter broken and represent some of the top genetics available in the breed. Trucking is available throughout the U.S.

The annual convention is just one of many Highland activities that will take place around the country in 2001. Nine regional associations throughout the U.S. have activities planned in their areas. AHCA's Roll of Excellence program recognizes Highland point shows in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Colorado, Wyoming and Washington.

Highland cattle are one of the world's oldest breeds, known for their striking appearance with long flowing hair and elegant horns. Cattle breeders value them for strong maternal characteristics, ease of management and outstanding carcass merit. Highland beef is prized for its flavor and tenderness.

For further information on the Highland breed or any AHCA activity, please contact us at (303) 292-9102, ahca@envisionet.net or the Website www.highlandcattle.org.

USDA Revises Standards For Dry Whole Milk, Effective April 13

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The United States Department of Agriculture has revised the United States Standards for Grades of Dry Whole Milk. They will become effective April 13.

The changes will:

- Lower the maximum bacterial estimate for U.S. Extra Grade to not more than 10,000 per gram and for U.S. Standard Grade to not more than 50,000 per gram;
- Include protein content as an optional test;
- Incorporate a maximum titratable acidity requirement for U.S. Extra Grade and U.S. Standard Grade;
- Expand the "Test methods" section to allow product evaluation using latest methods included in Standard Methods for the Examination of Dairy Products in the Official Methods of Analysis of the Association of Official Analytical Chemists, and in standards developed by the International Dairy Federation;
- Reference the Food and Drug Administration's standards of identity for dry whole milk;
- Relocate information concerning the optional oxygen content determination; and
- Make editorial changes to provide consistency with other U.S. grade standards for dairy products.

The changes will strengthen the quality requirements of this standard to reflect improvements in dry whole milk quality and provide consistency with other dry milk standards.

A notice soliciting comments to the proposed changes was published in the Federal Register on July 28, 2000 (65 FR 46399-46421). Based on information received during the comment period, USDA determined that changes appropriate and revised the standards accordingly. The revised United States Standards for Grades of Dry Whole Milk were published in the March 14 Federal Register and will become effective on Apr. 13.

USDA grade standards are voluntary standards developed to facilitate the marketing process. Manufacturers of dairy products are free to choose whether or not to use these grade standards.

The revised Standards are available from Duane R. Spomer, Chief, Dairy Standardization Branch, Dairy Programs, Agricultural Marketing Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 2746, South Building, Stop 0230, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456 or by accessing the AMS home page at, www.ams.usda.gov/dairy/stand.htm.

2002 Farm Bill: Less Government Is More For Beef Industry

WASHINGTON DC — At a House Agriculture Committee hearing recently, Wythe Willey, President-elect of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), urged House committee members to minimize government programs for agriculture businesses. Willey emphasized that subsidies do not work and a free market economy is best.

"The members of NCBA understand that farm programs are a major component of US domestic policy and will remain so for the foreseeable future. Therefore, NCBA has been and will continue to be focused on ensuring that farm policy does not benefit one part of agriculture at the expense of another," Willey stated. "NCBA will not consent to US farm policy that is financed out of the pockets of the beef industry."

"We do not spend time or political capital trying to enact programs to deal with market downturns that in the end would only encourage overproduction and extend the downside life of the cattle cycle," NCBA director of legislative affairs, Bryan Dierlam said. "The market is truly a powerful force and is the beef industry's greatest strength."

The beef industry is concerned about government programs that inadvertently affect the price of feed grains or result in distorted market signals. Because all beef cattle account for nearly 30 percent of total grain consuming animal units, these actions can have major impacts on the economic well being of the beef industry. NCBA does not support direct price or income supports for the beef industry but is concerned about efforts to increase farm income by raising input prices on the beef industry.

Pennsylvania Farmers Air Concerns With Legislators

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farm bureau president Guy Donaldson has urged members of the General Assembly to take action on three issues causing concern among farmers in Pennsylvania — the state inheritance tax, water use legislation and local tax reform.

Donaldson made his remarks during an address to legislators and farmers attending a banquet April 2, which concluded the farm organization's annual Harrisburg Tour. Earlier in the day, about 400 farmers visited their state Senators and Representatives to discuss several farm concerns, including those highlighted by Donaldson.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a nongovernmental, voluntary farm organization which represents 28,000 farm and rural families statewide. Members of PFB's 54 county Farm Bureau legislative committees traveled to Harrisburg to meet with their legislators.

Even though tax rates were reduced last year, the state inheritance tax continues to put a burden on farm families, Donaldson told legislators. "In order to generate the funds that are needed to pay hefty death taxes, heirs often have to sell parts of the business," Donaldson explained. "When parts are sold, the economic viability of the farm is destroyed. In addition, open space can be lost, surviving family members can be displaced, employees can lose their jobs and rural communities can lose their economic base."

Farm Bureau is supporting H.B. 236 which would reduce state inheritance tax rates to three percent, down from 4½ percent, for property passing to children and to 10 percent, down from 12 percent, for property going to brothers and sisters.

"Farming is tough enough for young people trying to get into the business without having to worry about how to pay the tax so they can inherit what their parents wanted them to have," Donaldson said.

Discussing water use regulation, Donaldson noted that numerous water resource management bills have been introduced this session. In addition, the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is planning a series of meetings throughout the state to discuss water quality and quantity issues.

"In order for our farms to be viable and grow, we need access to an adequate water supply," Donaldson said. "The agriculture community is extremely concerned that local government could be given the power to regulate agriculture out of business through water regulations. Unreasonable water regulations would have a devastating impact on agriculture."

On the issue of water quality, Donaldson pointed out that numerous state and federal laws have been implemented in the past few years increasing the requirements farmers must meet for water pollution control. "There is no need to place additional regulations on agriculture at this time," he said. "Furthermore, an assessment of water quality of streams conducted by DEP conclusively shows the impact of Pennsylvania farms on water quality is marginal." Of the 45,000 miles of streams assessed by DEP so far, only 6.4 percent were found to be impacted by agriculture.

Addressing the issue of local tax reform, Donaldson told lawmakers, "Farm Bureau has been and continues to be one of the biggest supporters of Act 50." Act 50 of 1998 gives school districts the option of increasing local earned income taxes in order to provide property tax relief through homestead and farmstead exemptions.

However, due to the poor response by school districts and taxpayers in the three years since it was enacted, "it is clear that Act 50 will not be the solution to local tax reform that we had hoped," Donaldson said. To date, only three of the Commonwealth's 501 school districts have changed their taxing system to implement Act 50.

"Pennsylvania farmers continue to pay a disproportionate share of property taxes compared to their income," Donaldson said. "We urge the General Assembly to go back to the drawing board and work together to develop and enact new or amended legislation to change our current system of local taxation."

Farm Bureau supports changes that will shift the burden of taxation from real estate taxes to a combination of the earned income tax, sales tax, flat benefit tax, and real estate tax. Tax reform legislation also needs to eliminate local nuisance taxes and personal property taxes.

"We all continue to enjoy the cheapest, safest and most nutritious food in the world. The only way farmers can continue to provide this is through reducing the regulations that threaten farmers' productivity and livelihood," Donaldson said. "As legislators, you can help by approving legislation which will reduce farm taxes, including the inheritance tax."

USDA Certification Of Egg Producer Organizations Ends April 13

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is inviting egg producer organizations that are not already USDA-certified as eligible to nominate members and alternates to the certification by April 13.

USDA will seek nominations this summer from all USDA-certified egg producer groups to fill two-year terms of nine members and their alternates, whose terms expire at the end of 2001.

The board administers an egg research and promotion program, authorized by the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act. AMS, an agency in USDA's marketing and regulatory mission area, monitors the program.

Organizations wishing to be certified should request an application and information from Shethir Mustafa, Poultry Programs, AMS, USDA, 1400 Independence Avenue., S.W., Room 3932-S, STOP 0256, Washington, D.C. 20250, phone (202) 720-0623, fax (202) 720-5631.

After certification, such organizations will receive information on how to nominate producers or representatives of producers to serve on the board.

N.Y. Farm Bureau Testifies At BSE Hearing

GLENMONT, N.Y. — On behalf of the more than 31,000 member families of New York Farm Bureau, state board member Andrew "Jock" Williamson testified Mar. 30 to the safety of the United States' beef supply before the New York State Assembly Task Force on Food, Farm and Nutrition Policy in Albany.

The Assembly Task Force hearing was held to examine issues surrounding emerging livestock-related diseases such as bovine spongiform encephalapathy (BSE) and foot and mouth disease (FMD). The Task Force seeks to determine the effectiveness of New York State's policies and programs to protect public health and New York agriculture.

Concurrently, during the organization's annual policy trip to Washington, D.C., New York Farm Bureau leaders met with both the Senate and House Agriculture Committees and the United States Department of Agriculture on BSE and FMD. To date, there has never been a case of BSE in the U.S., and the last known case of FMD in the U.S. was in 1929.

"In this country, we are fortunate to have a strong regulatory system in place to prevent these diseases from emerging in the U.S.," stated Williamson. "Numerous safeguards have been adopted by the federal government to protect the safety of our beef supply and health of consumers."

There is strong concern within the agricultural community regarding the remote possibility of finding BSE in our beef supply. Ensuring public safety and the safety of livestock is the priority of the agricultural industry. New York Farm Bureau and the American Farm Bureau Federation are working with federal and state authorities to make certain all of the possible surveillance and prevention measures are being taken. Topics surrounding this issue were a priority when New York Farm Bureau President, John W. Lincoln and the organization's Executive Committee met with Agriculture Committee representatives from both the U.S. House of Representatives, the U.S. Senate and the USDA earlier this week.

"It is our best interest as farmers to make certain that our industry remains protected from BSE," added Williamson. "We support measures that the United States Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration are taking to guard against the introduction of BSE."

Authorities in the United States took an early and hard line on banning imported livestock and related products before BSE began to devastate Europe in the mid-1980s. Since then, USDA has reinforced importation regulations as well as having increased efforts to curb the introduction of BSE or FMD to the U.S. inadvertently from an international traveler. New York Farm Bureau believes that these efforts, and the efforts of farmers working with veterinarians and regulators, will prevent the risk of outbreaks of either disease in the U.S.

"Everyone should have confidence in our beef supply," added Williamson. "We participated in this hearing to make sure that all of the necessary information on this issue is taken into account when the State determines what, if any, additional measures need to be taken."

Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association Conducts Annual Banquet

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

BOALSBURG (Centre Co.) — Recently representatives of the cattle industry gathered to honor award winners and scholarship recipients as well hear the latest news at the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA) annual banquet.

Karissa Jacobs, from National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) member services, gave a summary on NCBA actions. One of the organization's tops priorities, said Jacobs, is the total elimination of the death tax. "We're optimistic about it with the new Congress," she said.

Bill McCoy, PCA president, addressed the audience with an optimistic message. "Within the next couple of years, we should meet cyclical highs," said McCoy. Lower feed costs, cattle prices, and import limitations should help the cattle industry realize profits, he said.

McCoy also noted that the Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) meetings have been well attended across the state. "This program is one way of showing the public that we care," said McCoy.

Scholarship Recipients

Joy Lesher, Pitman, Schuylkill County, took home the Ivomec Generations of Excellence scholarship presented by Kristina Schreder.

Growing up on a dairy farm gave Lesher the background knowledge helpful in her dairy and animal science major at Delaware Valley College, where she is a junior. The daughter of Marlin and Dawn Lesher, she plans to attend veterinary school at Ohio State in the fall.

Jen Flinchbaugh, daughter of Ed and Lou Ann Keeny, won the Pfizer scholarship. At sophomore dairy and animal science major at Penn State, Flinchbaugh plans to attend graduate school for animal nutrition.

Flinchbaugh grew up on a sheep farm in Dallastown, York County. She hopes to work for a feed sales company or conduct research at a university.

Randy Shaner took home the PCA scholarship. The son of Robert and Denise Shaner of Peterson and Shaner Farms, Douglassville, Berks County, Shaner is a senior at Delaware Valley College.

He plans to return home to the farm, a 300-head commercial cow/calf Angus operation, and is looking forward to trying new techniques at home.

Directors Elected

Six new directors were elected during the meeting. Daniel Gross, Mt. Wolf, York County, farms in partnership with his brother and with help from their father and grandfather. The family runs a feedlot of 600 steers, feeds heifers, and has 100 cows.

Bob Hay is the general manager of Errer Hill farms, an Angus and commercial cow/calf farm located in Friedens, Somerset County. He is also agriculture manager of Lincoln Supply and Equipment Company, a farm and industrial supply company in Somerset.

Marlin Paul, Klingerstown, both Schuylkill and Northumberland counties, was also elected. Along with his son, Steve, they have a herd of 100 registered Angus cows, background 100 head, and finish 350 head.

Willard "Bunk" Smith, Dillsburg, York County, and his father have a commercial cowherd primarily of Angus breeding with the recent addition of Simmental cows. He is employed by J and J Agricultural Sales.

Jere L. Wingert, St. Thomas, Franklin County, farms on Wingert Farms with his father, Eugene, operating a 200-head cow/calf operation and feedlot and farming 800 acres.

Award Winners

Wayne Hoffman presented the annual PCA awards. Commercial Cow/Calf Producer Award went to Hempt Farms, Mechanicsburg. The family has commercial black cattle with a herd history going back to cows from Montana. George Hempt was joined by herdman Archie Madden, from Missouri, to accept the award.

Seedstock Producer Of The Year went to John and Joann Hausner, Dover, York County, Angus and Polled Hereford breeders. The couple, with 30 of their own Angus, are involved in several aspects of the cattle industry including judging, fitting, and showing cattle.

Cattle Feeder Of The Year went to Lee Zimmerman, part of a family enterprise which includes not only feeding 2,000 cattle a year but also an orchard business.

The Industry Service Award went to Bill and Nancy Campbell, Duncansville, Blaire Coun-

Bill and Nancy Campbell, owners and operators of Hoss's Steak and Sea House, were recognized with the Industry Service Award.

BENEFITS OF JOINING THE LANCASTER CHAMBER

With the rapidly changing environment of the agriculture industry, it is important for you to stay informed of issues impacting your farm or agribusiness. It is equally important to know what services are available to you to help strengthen your business.

Membership in The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry will allow your farm or agribusiness to be part of the collective voice of more than 3,000 area businesses. The Lancaster Chamber has an active Agriculture Services Program dedicated to agriculture education, legislative monitoring, and outreach to the nonfarm community.

Since 1872, The Lancaster Chamber has been the premier organization serving the collective needs and enhancing a viable business climate for Lancaster County. The Lancaster Chamber is the second largest Chamber in the state, which is quite impressive considering the size of other metropolitan areas throughout Pennsylvania.

The Chamber's Agriculture Committee is a very talented and knowledgeable group of agriculture leaders, that serves as the advisory group to the Agriculture Services Program. The Agriculture Committee is comprised of 22 members: six production farmers, six agribusinesses, six agriculture lenders, and four ex-officio members, including representation from the county commissioners office, Penn State extension, Lancaster conservation district, and Lancaster Farmland Trust.

In 1990, the Chamber's Agriculture Committee formed the nation's first full-time Chamber agriculture services position, which is a partnership with the county. The ag committee's primary goal is to better educate the nonfarm community on the economic benefits and value of the agriculture industry in Lancaster County.

In recognition of the accomplishments of the Agriculture Services Program in 2000, the Chamber's program received the Pennsylvania Farm-City Award from Governor Tom Ridge and Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr. for its commitment to promoting agriculture in Lancaster County.

One of the many educational events the Chamber conducts is the annual Farm Business Management School. This year, Dr. Dave Kohl from Virginia Tech was the featured speaker at the two-day school in which farmers, agbusiness managers, and FFA and 4-H students attended.

Another exciting annual event is the Family Farm Days at the Oregon Dairy Farm Market, which will take place on June 12-15. This three-day educational farm event attracted 8,000 people last year.

The annual Farm Field Day at Cedar Meadow Farm will be held July 25. This is an educational event geared to farmers and members of the ag industry to learn more about productive farming practices using conservation techniques.

The 25th annual Agriculture Industry Banquet will be on Nov. 20. This event serves as the premier banquet to celebrate Lancaster County's agriculture industry.

Other projects the Ag Services Program has been involved with include the Agriculture Attache Tour, an effort to build international trade relations within the ag industry, and a Township Agri-Growth Workshop, where 240 elected township officials and farmers discussed possible solutions to conflicts which arise between the farm industry and local townships. Future projects the Agriculture Committee is planning include agriculture economic development services, a quarterly township ag-education newsletter, and updated Lancaster County Farming Facts brochures.

Additional value-added services that Chamber members may take advantage of are low-cost medical insurance, small business retirement plans, reduced rates on seminars, programs and events, such as the annual Farm Business Management School and Agricultural Industry Banquet, and online recruiting through NationJob.

The Chamber is seeking your farm or agribusiness membership to help strengthen the voice of the agricultural business community. The more ag members The Chamber gains, the greater agricultural services it can provide, helping to strengthen the industry.

For more information on joining The Lancaster Chamber, call Brent Landis, Agricultural services coordinator, or Sandy Brill, membership manager at the Chamber, at (717) 397-3531 or e-mail blandis@lcci.com. You may also visit the Chamber's Website at www.lancaster-chamber.com.

ADA/DC Middle Atlantic Elects Officers

PHILADELPHIA — The American Dairy Association/ Dairy Council Middle Atlantic board of directors recently elected officers and welcomed a new member to the board.

Re-elected as chairman was Charles Schilling, Petersburg. Schilling, who has been farming for 35 years, said he strongly believes in dairy promotion and its effectiveness in increasing milk sales. "Dairy promotion checkoff programs are working to increase dairy product demand," he said.

"The dairy industry, from producers to processors, is focused on increasing dairy product demand," Schilling said. "It is our responsibility, as dairy promotion board members, to see that dairy checkoff programs are managed effectively and efficiently."

Producers re-elected as ADA/DC Middle Atlantic officers were Steve Graybeal, Peach Bottom, vice chairman; Robert Winner, Moorestown, N.J., secretary; and Jerrel Heatwole, Greenwood, Del., treasurer. Ken Schoenberg, Shippensburg, was welcomed as a new board member.

Using Information Technology, Balancing Work, Family, Are Topics At Poultry Conference

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Leading poultry feed management companies are making use of information technology and personal digital assistants (PDAs) in groundbreaking ways.

According to Rob Barber, director of information systems for Wenger's Feed Mill, Rheems, the company is going through a complete Palm Pilot and PC rollout to "replace paper day planners" and provide up-to-the-minute information for on-the-spot report generation at the farm.

Barber and others spoke Tuesday during the Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Bob Kreider, regional manager, Northeast, Hy-Line International in Elizabethtown, believes PDAs are tools to improve the manager's work in the company.

PDA prices range from $170 on the low end to about $500 on the high end, and can do a lot of things in addition to replacing "Franklin Planners and Daytimers," Kreider noted.

PDAs are small, pocket sized, lightweight, and powerful. They are easy to use in the field, Kreider noted, and can be turned on instantly — unlike a bulky desktop PC, which needs to be booted up.

They can do "almost all the functions of a PC," he said. And information can still be printed out in hard copy.

PDAs include an address book, calculator, to-do list, and memo pad. Advanced functions include database management, farm location coordinates through the global position system, worldwide Web access (e-mail and Internet), and time and money management features.

Rob Barber of Wenger's in Rheems said the company will have Palm Pilot PDAs preloaded with essential producer information. The PDAs make use of a customized database program that can record house, ventilation, flock, productivity, feed, water, egg quality, cooler, and other information. That information can be sorted and compared, and data necessary for overall management decisions can be "extracted."

The goals, noted Barber, are to eliminate multiple paper copies, streamline data distribution, establish standards, and identify and monitor trends.

The tool will soon be going "live in the field," perhaps as early as next week, Barber said.

John Fidler, vice president of technical services and procurement for Pennfield Corporation in Rohrerstown, spoke about several wide-ranging company initiatives in using information technology.

Dan Heller, managing partner in Flintrock Farms, Lititz, noted the increased use of PCs in broiler management.

One complex in Lititz has eight broiler houses under contract with Tyson. The houses have a capacity of 200,000 birds and produce one million birds per year.

Another Flintrock Farms' complex in Church Hill, Md., includes six rooster houses under contract with Allen's at 200,000-bird capacity for 950,000 birds per year.

Both will soon be managed remotely using a PC-compatible environmental controller system. The houses run a 12-stage stagemaster system.

The system will track bird production information, and gas, water, electricity, and other expenses. Environmental monitors will be under control through the PC system. Later on, cell phones hooked to laptop computers will allow farm managers to track the system anywhere.

This system is "another tool in the toolbox" to provide better control over the houses from managers, Heller noted.

Tom Pantano, broiler manager, Tyson Foods, New Holland, said that a service person's job is "30 percent chicken knowledge and 70 percent managing people."

The service person is "a personnel manager," he said. "You have to motivate people."

The service person must focus on the problems and be people-oriented, turning problems to profit.

Pantano noted that on his visits, he brings "dog bones, (candy) and bubble gum," he said. When the dogs come, the grower follows.

He points out the acronym FLAWED, which means Feed, Light, Air, Water, Employee, and Diseases. Keeping track of those elements helps produce the "best quality chicken at least cost," Pantano said.

One of the enjoyable parts of the job is presenting the settlement check directly to the grower. "It gives you a lot of pride if (the grower) sees it and it is a good one," Pantano said.

Pantano pointed out words on a plaque given to him from a grower: "Count that day lost whose setting sun finds no good deed or kindness done."

Daniel Perkins, Penn State associate professor, ag and extension education, pointed out to those at the conference the importance of having a network of family and friends for support, to balance work and life, and have a commitment to family and community to gain a sense "of accountability and usefulness," he said.

Perkins' area of expertise at Penn State includes "kids and families in pretty stressful situations," he said.

But through experience and support, spirituality and a positive attitude, people can learn to thrive in adversity.

It's crucial to set life goals and have a "confidant" or friend to speak with. Perkins recommended the book, "Tuesdays With Morrie."

What worries Perkins and other researchers into human behavior is the "disintegration of social capital" necessary to help people. In the past two decades, according to Perkins, the number of bowling allies has doubled. But the number of bowling leagues has been cut in half.

In the past, houses were designed with porches in the front. Now, they are in back.

Those elements are helping to fuel the social capitol disintegration.

But an individual's positive attitude, networking with friends and community, and cultivating professional and personal relationships remain keys to coping.

Consumers React Positively, Adopt Biotech In Foods

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — It's often said that consumers are fickle. But few are called savvy.

A series of surveys conducted by a nonprofit organization recently showed some strong evidence that there is no strong support for Food and Drug Administration (FDA) biotechnology derived food product labeling. It could signify that consumers are more wary of the nonscientific claims of antibiotech groups.

In fact, according to a recent survey, more than 50 percent of consumers are somewhat to very likely willing to purchase food modified by biotechnology if that food would taste better or fresher, according to Cheryl Toner, program manager, food safety, for the International Food Information Council (IFIC) in Washington, D.C.

Toner spoke to about 110 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives during the opening of a two-day, Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference Tuesday morning at the Nittany Lion Inn.

IFIC, founded in 1985, is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to communicate science-based information on food safety and nutrition to health and nutrition professionals, educators, government officials, journalists, and others to consumers.

Toner, a registered dietician, said that the media — newspapers, television, and radio — significantly influence "what people think and hear and believe about food safety," she said.

IFIC publishes Food Insight, a bimonthly newsletter with more than 45,000 readers. IFIC has its own Website with information on surveys and what it has found about the public's perception about biotechnology and food safety. The address is www.ific.org.

Toner noted a famous saying: "scientists are from Saturn, the media from Mars, but consumers are from Cleveland," she said.

Before biotechnology became a hot issue with food consumers, in 1992 the institute addressed the biotech issue, surveying consumers in 10 U.S. cities. Toner said there were a few events, including cloning of Dolly, the sheep, in 1997 and the Monarch butterfly/Bt issue and the StarLink corn/taco shell controversies last year that really put the spotlight on biotechnology in foods.

Of the issues important to consumers, fats and cholesterol top the chart, at 41 percent, followed by carbohydrates at 31 percent, eating animal products at 28 percent, and spices at 11 percent. Only 2 percent of those polled really are concerned about bioengineered foods.

In the latest poll of consumers in several cities conducted in January this year, 70 percent were likely to purchase foods modified by biotechnology if the crops grown are protected from insect damage and required fewer pesticides.

People vote in favor of biotechnology if they "see it as an environmental benefit," said Toner.

If biotech can be used to provide cooking oil lower in saturated fat, 46 percent showed a positive response. Survey participants were asked if they believed biotech would benefit them as a family in the next five years, and 64 percent, as of January, answered yes.

Current FDA labeling requirements include possible allergy product notice or if there is a change in nutrient content of the food ingredients.

But FDA critics want the labeling requirements to include biotechnologically enhanced or altered food components. Yet 70 percent of respondents, noted Toner, support the current labeling, which does not specify biotech.

Many respondents would be satisfied if that information would be posted on company Websites or in brochures and consumer mailings.

"People definitely have mixed feelings about labeling for biotech products in food," she said.

Yet despite the recent StarLink corn product controversy, 53 percent of the respondents never heard of the genetically modified corn.

And scientists point out with StarLink, the issue wasn't food safety, but regulatory concerns, Toner noted.

The general media, said Toner, including TV, radio, magazines, and newspapers, are the number one source of information on food safety. The media is pervasive.

But there is consumer "savviness" about what they hear from so-called consumer activist groups.

In IFIC surveys, according to Toner, people support using biotech to alter plants. Even though many raise the argument that "genes are genes," and can be used across species, many don't feel "right" about using animal genes in plants or vice-versa.

But the higher the level of food safety education, the more educated those are presenting the information, the more consumers become trusting.

The very wording can be key. People accept food "biotechnology," but react in a less positive way to the perceived more invasive, more threatening term, "genetic engineering," even though they are the same.

"The words you use," she said, "can definitely effect how people are reacting to what you have to say."

The Center For Science In Public Interest does not support labeling, but does support the science behind food biotechnology. IFIC has developed a book, "Food Biotechnology," used in several Indiana school districts from grades K-12.

The helpful guide takes a complex topic and makes it understandable to the layperson, Toner noted.

Grange Master Cites Four Years Of Low Farm, Dairy Prices

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Kermit W. Richardson, former Vermont Legislator from Orange, Vermont and current National Grange Master (President), testified March 16 before the Vermont General Assembly Committee on Agriculture regarding the National Grange's views on farm and rural policy. Citing the fourth year in a row of low farm, livestock and dairy prices, Richardson called for three basic goals to future farm and rural policy.

Increased Participation

The first Grange goal is adoption of federal and state farm policies that encourage increased participation in the agricultural sector by the largest number of individuals and families possible. Contrary to current trends, the Grange calls for broad distribution of agricultural assets. Establishing secure financial safety nets for farmers, reducing government's role in farm management, increasing farm exports and funding voluntary conservation programs are the means to accomplishing this goal Richardson told the Committee. As an example, he rated the Northeast Dairy Compact as "one of the most successful agricultural policy innovations of the last decade."

Eliminate the "death tax"

Eliminating the so-called "death tax" is a means to achieve the Grange's second policy goal, the orderly transfer of family farms to the next generation. "Within a decade, a majority of today's farmers will be over 65," Richardson explained. Only through "death tax" elimination and extending capital gains exemptions to family farms will the current farm generation be able to retire with "dignity" and the next generation "manage and expand the resources we have invested in agriculture," Richardson declared. He also called for reauthorization of Chapter 12 bankruptcy laws in order to reorganize farm debt rather than liquidate farm assets.

Rural Quality of Life

Enhanced quality of life for rural America is the Grange's third policy goal. Richardson pointed out that no matter how successful farm policy, people are not going to farm unless they have a decent quality of life. That means good schools, access to health care, safe and reliable roads and transportation, and safe communities. "And finally," Richardson told the committee, "regardless of the manner that we distribute government farm program payments, young people will not stay in any community that is not connected to the world through the Internet."

Richardson concluded his testimony by describing the Grange's "Blueprint for Rural America 2001," a ten-point policy proposal on agriculture and other rural, non-farm issues.

Stakeholders Meeting April 10

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced the Department of Agriculture will host an Industry Stakeholders Meeting Tuesday, April 10, to review the latest news regarding foot and mouth disease (FMD).

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in Room 309 of the state Agriculture Building.

The department will review the recent developments with FMD in the United Kingdom and the European Union. In addition, there will be a discussion on what is being done in Pennsylvania to prevent such an outbreak from occurring here.

The stakeholders group includes representatives from Pennsylvania's beef, dairy, and pork industries, as well as officials from the USDA's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS).

Northeast Farm Communicators Association Presents Awards

TRUMANSBURG, N.Y. — The Northeast Farm Communicators Association awarded certificates of excellence to participants in the Nor'Easter Contest during its spring meeting recently in Meriden, Conn.

Chris Fesko of Chris Fesko Enterprises, Skaneateles, N.Y., was named the Farm Communicator of the Year and awarded a plaque, and $500 donated by Agri-Mark Inc. dairy cooperative.

The contest recognizes the best in writing, photography and broadcasting media covering Northeast agriculture. It was administered by Ed Slusarczyk of Ag Radio Network in Utica, N.Y., and judged by the Journalism Department of Utica College under the direction of Dr. Kim Landon.

Other winners were best on-farm feature, Judy Powell, freelance; best agricultural news story, John Vogel and Jeanette Marvin, Farm Progress Companies; best column or editorial commentary, Eleanor Jacobs, Northeast DairyBusiness; best agricultural series, John Vogel, Jeanette Marvin, Kelly Fuersteinberg and Carol Greathouse, Farm Progress Companies; best agricultural photo/image, Jeanette Marvin, Farm Progress Companies; best agricultural news release, Kirsten Ferguson, American Farmland Trust; best agricultural newsletter, Kelly Fuerstenberg, Red Pen Publishing; and best one-time project, Diane Baedeker Petit, Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture.

The Northeast Farm Communicators is an organization of professional reporters, writers, editors, broadcasters, public relations specialists, and other agricultural communicators throughout New England and the Northeast.

Among other activities, the organization publishes the NEFC Service Directory, a guide to agricultural information in the Northeast. The 70-page, 4-inch by 8.5-inch booklet lists NEFC members and 600 contacts in the agriculture industry. The cost is $3. For a copy or for more information on NEFC, contact Chris Kimball-Peterson, 6020 Searsburg Road, Trumansburg, NY 14886, (607) 387-4990, or e-mail CLKP329@aol.com.

ROASTING PROVIDES STERILIZED GRAIN
Only open flame roasting eliminates molds and reduces toxins to tolerable levels
~ It's effect on grain...
Testing results from samples of Flame Roasted corn, barley and oats reduced the 4-deoxynivalenol (DON) of the grains by 37% and Zearalenone (ZEA) by an average of 77%.
~ Roasting reduced the mold counts by between 48 and 98% (PO:05 ZEA by 50% and free ergosterol by 41%).
~ Roasting has caused 40-80% degradation of aflatoxin B, and up to 90% degradation of ochratoxin A
*Documentation of above statements available upon request.
For Beef and Dairy...
~ Less fermentable feeds in the total ration. Better rumen health.
~ Better herd health reflects improved breeding, less abortions and healthier feet meaning fewer veterinarian bills.
~ Increased milk production in dairy cattle
~ Increased daily gain in beef
For Swine...
~ Roasting grain increases productivity by 20-30%
~ Sterilizing corn can increase weight gain for growers.
~ Can improve fertility in gilts and sows.
~ Can eliminate tailbiting
For Poultry...
~ Removing molds on grain fed to poultry can improve broiler weight gains
~ Improve resistance to infection and increase egg production
*Facts from a six year research study at Purdue University, W. Lafayette, IN.

ty, owners and operators of Hoss's Steak and Sea House, for the financial support and time given to 4-H and FFA programs.

They have purchased animals for the past 13-15 years, estimates Campbell. Last year they attended 52 sales, said Bill, who grew up on an "all-purpose" farm in Blair County and was involved in FFA as a youth.

John and Kathy Allen, Armstrong Farms, Saxonburg, Butler County, won the Environmental Stewardship Award. Covering nearly 1,000 acres, the farm includes 100 Angus females and 200 Shorthorn females.

One of the first farms in Butler County to develop a conservation plan with the help of the NRCS, the operation also pioneered in putting in a rotational grazing system, solar power water system, and streambank fencing.

Pennsylvania Simmental Association awards were also presented during the evening. Family Of The Year went to the Messick family of Middletown. The family is active not only in the show ring with their prize-winning Simmentals but also in the Simmental Association.

Breeder Of The Year honors went to H. Robert and Connie McQuiston, Haven Wood Farms, Stoneboro, Mercer County, who have the top indexing and highest gaining bull this year at Penn State's bull test, setting a record for gain among the 2,000 bulls tested in the program since its inception.

The couple began with 17 animals in 1990 and have increased to 300 animals in 600 acres, aided by Dave and Annette Downs, herdsmen.

Junior Member Of The Year, from York, was Raymond Stough. Involved with the Simmental breed in his younger years, Stough has continued to show, breed, and raise champions at local and state level competitions. He plans to continue helping at the home farm and start his own farm in the area in the future.

Senior Member Of The Year, also from York, was John Myers of Dunkard Valley Farms, Dallastown, York County. Very involved with PCA and Simmental Association activities, Myers is also Beef Expo treasurer.

Penn State's Meat Judging team, which took home first-place honors at the NCBA convention in San Antonio this February, were recognized during the banquet. Members included, from left, Doug Koontz, Everett, Bedford County; Tia Kreider, Chambersburg, Franklin County; Kurt Beidel, Shippensburg, Cumberland County; and Mark Hazelton, Wellsboro, Tioga County. They are joined by coach Jana Peters, animal science advising coordinator at Penn State.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

moderate growth in demand will result in a draw down in commercial stocks. Commercial ending stocks, which grew almost 12 percent in 2000, are expected to decline 4.5 percent in 2001. In addition, it is assumed that USDA net removals of dairy products (on a milkfat basis) under the dairy price support program will be very minimal in 2001.

Milk Prices

Federal order prices are forecast in Table 2. They show a significant increase in Class III and IV prices, and in the federal order blend prices for the Northeast. This forecast is based on an economic model that starts with weekly dairy commodity prices and produces component values and class prices under federal orders. NASS survey Grade AA butter prices are expected to rise from $1.31 per pound in February to $1.71 by April. This forecast is based on futures market information for Class IV prices and a tight milk supply balance. NASS survey cheese prices are expected to rise from $1.15 per pound in February and peak at $1.50 per pound by September.

This economic model is forecasting a rise in Class III federal order prices of $3 per CWT during the months of July-September when compared to these same months a year ago. Likewise, Class IV federal order prices are expected to rise $2.50 per CWT relative to the same months a year ago. About 30 percent of the federal order blend price in the Northeast is driven by the Class III price and the remaining 70 percent by the Class IV price (which also impacts the Class I and II prices). Thus, the federal order blend price (adjusted to Lancaster, Pennsylvania), is projected to rise $2.32 per cwt.

What Could Change?

Readers should be cautioned that milk price forecasting is not an exact science. Part of the forecasts provided here is based on market expectations from the CME futures markets for the months April through November. It is also based on a projected slowing in the rate of growth in the milk supply and moderate growth in demand for milk and dairy products. Any changes in the milk supply or demand for dairy products could result in a significant change in the forecast.

Ohio Bulls Off Test, Sale Order, Data Available

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Final 112-day data and the sale order for the 32nd annual Ohio Bull Test are posted on the OBT webpage (www.ag.ohio-state.edu/bulltest).

Each of the 108 bulls catalogued in the sale has passed a breeding examination. Catalogues should be available soon, and video tapes of the bulls will be available at each of the remote sale sites.

Again this year, remote sale sites will be located at OSU Extension offices in Shelby, Carroll, and Knox counties and at the south district extension office in Jackson.

For more information about the 32nd Ohio Bull Test, contact Justin Lahmers (jlahmers@ohiobeef.org) in the OCA office, (614) 873-6736.

tion, to auction organizer Mark Glick, to the many hearts and hands who were involved in so many ways, thank you!

There have been so many who have helped that it would be impossible to name each one. Mostly, thank you for the compassion expressed in letters, cards and prayers, which has sustained the Swarey household through this trial and assured them of God's healing hand upon Lena. They appreciate your continued prayers.

Hamburg Hosts Junior Preview Classic II

HAMBURG, N.Y. — Come out to the Hamburg Fairgrounds for the Empire State Junior Preview Classic II June 29-30.

You will witness kids under age 21 as they compete with their 200-pound animal (on the average) to win more than $3,100 in prizes.

The Eric County Agricultural Society is proud to bring back the show with anticipation of more than 200 animals. The show gives the kids invaluable experience with the animals they have been working very hard with over the past year.

Come cheer on the participants as they work together with their animal to vie for champion showman, supreme champion heifer, or grand champion steer.

Showmanship is Friday at 7 p.m. and heifers will begin Saturday at 10 a.m. with steers to follow. All sections will be conducted in the livestock arena.

For more information, call (716) 649-3900, ext. 407.

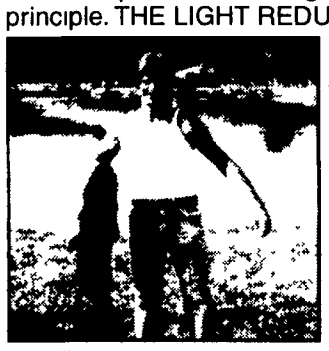
AQUASHADE
AQUATIC PLANT GROWTH CONTROL
FOR ALL SEASONS
FOR CONTROL OF UNWANTED AQUATIC WEEDS AND ALGAE

The problem of suppressing unwanted Aquatic Growth has never had a simpler solution. AQUASHADE works on a basic scientific principle. THE LIGHT REDUCTION PRINCIPLE.



AQUASHADE IS:
• Economical, because it's long lasting.
• Non-toxic, no harm to humans, livestock, fish, wildlife and turf (EPA Registered)
• Non-killing, because it controls growth by suppressing.
• Easy to use by just pouring.
• Beautifying, by coloring water to a natural teal blue.

Pa. Grange Receives Response To 'Fowl' Problem

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange is working with the USDA and Senator Arlen Specter's staff to address a growing problem on a number of farms across the state — an overabundance of Canadian geese.

At the request of the Pennsylvania State Grange during its recent legislative bus trip to Washington, D.C., past State Master (President) Charlie Wismer asked Specter for governmental assistance on the impact of the geese population — particularly in southeast Pennsylvania, where numerous farms are being overrun by geese.

The geese "have completely devastated my rye crop. The wheat crop is in terrible shape, possibly the worst I have ever had, and the Audobon Society was quoted in an Associated Press story that there are 60,000 geese in Bucks County," Wismer of Trappe, Montgomery County, said.

"Farmers are able to shoot deer for crop damage, and the same should be available to us for geese damage."

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman, Specter asked for the USDA's help in determining the impact of geese populations in Pennsylvania.

"Concerns have been raised by agricultural and other groups about problems associated with the large populations of geese throughout the commonwealth," Specter wrote. "News reports in Pennsylvania have attributed a number of problems to geese recently, including damages to crops, homeowner's lawns, golf courses and stream banks, as well as safety hazards at airports and water pollution."

Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director of the Pennsylvania State Grange, thanks Specter for taking immediate action

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Spring.

Spring up. spring forth. Spring out. Spring open.

And, everything is. "Springing," that is. Right now.

I went looking for a little bit of some of the springing stuff one misty morning last week. Fresh tossed salad was on the menu for lunch, along with barbecued spareribs and baked potatoes. To add a little spring-tonic interest to the greens was my intent.

It wouldn't hurt to wipe out a few pre-blooming dandelion plants anyway. They'd probably not be missed when the bulk of these "weeds" start springing wide their sunny-yellow blooms. With a sharp, pointy-tipped kitchen knife, I dug into the soggy soil, made a quick circular motion around the root and came up with a delicate rosette of the jagged-edged leaves, just unfurling and still tender and mild in flavor.

Dandelion greens are a rather costly delicacy when purchased at specialty markets. These cost me about five minutes of my time. As an added bonus, the ones scattered around the yard and flower gardens are purely organic — no chemicals and only manure fertilizer. Applied at random whenever heifers or cows split from a pasture or feedlot to go carousing around the yard.

In search of the dandelion leaf tidbits, we (the dog, cats and I) took inventory of other "springing stuff" around the yard. Oodles of daffodil clusters dot the flower beds, some already pushing open brave yellow flowers in defiance of the lingering chill and persistent winds.

Daffodils are the rebel plants of the season, determined to bloom on schedule and refusing to hug the earth for protection. Instead, they stretch their foliage and stems high, unfurl those stunning cup-shaped blossoms and occasionally get snowed on for their effort. Three smaller-bloomed, species-daffodil blossoms beckoned from the perennial border, just about to spring into fully display. A few hours of the kitchen's warmth coaxed them wide open.

Their glow-yellow fit right in with a small bouquet of forsythia stems, most of them knocked loose from their mother-plant moorings as I raked leaves one short, sunny stretch of afternoon a few days earlier. The forsythias also spring to life early, dotting slender stems with swelling buds of yellow blossoms, then following with more somber green leaf garb.

Ever notice how the earliest flowers springing open are in intense shades, stunning yellow daffodils, brilliant red tulips, deep blue violets? It's almost as if Nature is trying to make apologies for the bleakness outdoors of the preceding many weeks.

We made a quick pass through the bare stretch of vegetable garden, just in case some precocious stalk of asparagus was getting ahead of itself and poking a tentative spear up through the manure The Farmer applied some time ago. None was. And before any do, someone had best attack a few perennial weeds scattered there and request a load of calf pen straw bedding be dumped there for mulching.

On a sheltered bank where a matted layer of dead leaves had been raked away, chips of brilliant blue dotted the damp earth. These tiny Siberian scilla plants are far hardier and durable then you could ever imagine from handling their tiny bulbs. The entire plant and its bloom stalk, a slender stem with star-like individual flowers in stunning, almost neon blue, is a bare few inches high. Mine have been in the ground for about 30 years and just keep spreading.

Someone should dig some of them and spread them around the garden a little more.

Fuzzy "kittens" have sprung out all over our towering pussy-willow, somber gray fuzzies as soft as a baby cat's fur. This "bush" was planted a year or two before the minuscule scilla bulbs, but is as hardy and durable as those tiny little things. The nicest stalks of soft, kitty-blooms are way, way over my head and impossible to cut for forcing. But the birds love it for nesting, so we'll leave it alone.

Shrubs are pushing buds and need to be pruned. The garden plastic must be yanked off for tillage, so we can start the whole process again. Twigs and bits of small dead limbs are waiting to be raked and there are those endless patches of matted leaves to be cleaned off.

Of all the stuff "springing up" right now, none is growing faster than my "to do" list.

Family Living Focus

Caught In The Middle

Any gathering can be stressful whether it's a birthday party, a wedding, a holiday celebration, or a more somber event like a funeral gathering. For an elder struggling with confusion and memory loss, just the stimulation from too many people can create anxiety and frustration — with resulting tears on both sides. Add children to this picture and you may rapidly start to feel overwhelmed and out-of-control.

Instead of being offended by an elder's anxious, combative, or "standoffish" behavior, make plans in advance to create an environment that encourages comfortable, but possibly limited involvement for any confused or memory-impaired loved ones. Consider the following guidelines:

• Arrange things so that the impaired family member gets to spend more one-on-one time rather than group-time. Several family members, including well-behaved younger members, can take turns spending time with the person needing quieter activities. By sharing the time, no one will need to totally miss out on the opportunity to visit with other members of the extended family.

• Organize one-to-one activities such as cutting up fruits or vegetables for the meal, assisting with dishes, sweeping the patio, or just sitting and enjoying friendship and conversation.

• This is a perfect opportunity to get Grandma or Grandpa to share stories about "how it used to be." A good way to start the storytelling is to ask a specific question — What can you tell me about the house in which you grew up? What was your favorite meal when you were little? How was it made? Where did your grandparents come from? What was that like — what did they tell you?

• Allow for quiet time away from the crowd for your loved one to rest or simply collect their thoughts.

• Plan a group activity that is not competitive or in any way threatening to the person — possibly a musical activity, a walk, or a short comic video.

• Prepare both the other adults and the children for the gathering. Give reminders to children to be respectful, to speak clearly and slowly, and to limit extremely rambunctious activity in the presence of the impaired family member.

• Vary activities often enough so that boredom does not set in. A person with memory impairment and confusion is also likely to have a short attention span.

Besides specifically planning for your elderly members, help everybody else as well by remembering to keep things as simple as possible. Try to maintain "routines" as much as possible and don't attempt too many activities. Take the time to enjoy your elders while they are here; regrets will not comfort anyone, but the memory of a loving chat will.

Storing Precious Linens And Lace

Fine linens and lace, regardless of age, deserve tender treatment. Although nothing can stop the natural aging process, certain storage precautions can control the damaging effects of light, pollution, temperature and humidity, advises The Soap and Detergent Association.

Ideal storage conditions include a light-free area with a temperature of 70°F and a humidity of about 50 percent.

Direct light, whether natural or artificial, can cause fibers to break down and fade. Low temperatures and high humidity create condensation, which can yellow the fabric. High temperatures and low humidity create dry, brittle fibers that eventually crumble. Where air pollution is a problem, there is greater potential for damage from humidity and moisture.

Use acid-free paper to line storage boxes or containers. This special paper absorbs harmful acids in cardboard, wood and paper that can destroy fiber.

Periodically inspect stored linens and laces. Hands should be clean and any jewelry that might snag or tear the textiles should be removed. If damage has occurred, consult a professional, such as the textile expert at a local museum or university.

Club Soda Cleanup

I have often heard that you can use club soda to remove stains.

Here's the truth of the matter: It can sometimes remove a clear, colorless, water-based stain, but clean cool water can do the job just as well.

However, neither club soda nor water possess any grease-removing properties. Therefore, they are not effective on greasy, oily stains, such as mayonnaise, butter or gravy. In fact, using club soda on an oil-based stain can reduce the chance of completely removing the stain.

If you do use club soda on a water-based stain, you should wash out the stain and club soda as soon as possible. The best solution for effectively removing all types of stains is to treat the stain using a prewash stain remover, then wash the garment as soon as possible.

Seagoing Cowboys Recapture Excitement Of Transporting Cattle To War-Torn Countries

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Seagoing cowboys gathered last week to reminisce about the excitement, drama, and life-changing events they experienced in the 1940-1950s. At the Heifer Project International banquets, the cowboys were honored for their role in providing livestock to countries devastated by war and economical distress.

Most of the 150 "cowboys" were 16-19 year-old farm boys when they made the voyage on cattle ships transporting mules, horses, heifers, and other livestock. Their job was to feed and care for the animals. One of their responsibilities was to make sure that the horses did not lay down; otherwise, the horses would not be able to get up again.

At least one veterinarian accompanied the livestock, which varied in number from 65-1,500 head per shipload. Together the vets and cowboys worked hard to maintain livestock health while on the high seas. The crew was especially thrilled if they lost only a few animals per voyage.

Success; however, wasn't always possible. One cowboy remembers his ship on the way to Italy lost more than 100 horses, which were lifted by cables, dumped overboard, and quickly devoured by sharks.

On one trip, three very high strung horses were being transported for breeding purposes. They were considered so valuable that a vet was assigned to stay by their sides the entire trip. Despite his frantic efforts to save one of the horses that became ill, it died. The death cast a pallor over the entire crew.

In contrast to horses and many breeds, "Brown Swiss cattle were so calm, they meekly chewed their cuds as if they couldn't care less about the swaying ship," William Longenecker said.

He and some of the other cowboys said they saw some wonderful sights in the ocean such as schools of flying fish and porpoises that followed the ship.

The cowboys who visited Poland and other war torn countries after World War I were appalled by the devastation.

"I'll never forget the women paving cobblestone streets. They were rebuilding the streets, one brick at a time," Eugene Groff said. "Russian soldiers were everywhere."

Currency preferred by many of these countries were cigarettes and chocolate. Most of the volunteers were non-smokers, but they could buy cigarettes on the ship at a low cost and exchange them for merchandise. Groff said that he obtained a German folding camera in exchange for a pack of cigarettes. He used the camera for many years.

Most of the cowboys still recall vivid memories of the devastation in the countries that visited after the war.

"I saw the horrors war had wrought and heard God say, 'I need you,'" said Bob Longenecker about his trip and his subsequent vocation as minister of a United Methodist congregation.

Longenecker recalled riding in the floor of a cattle car on Dec. 20. Crammed and uncomfortable in the jerking train, he and his fellow workers began singing Christmas carols. "We sang every song we knew, and when we stopped the passengers yelled for more songs," Longenecker said.

Rough waters resulted in many sick cowboys. Clarence Heller, Lancaster, said that he learned to stay in the hay hole, which was the bottom deck and consequently didn't sway as much as the top deck.

Bill Longenecker, Mount Joy, recalls that he was advised to eat to get over his seasickness. "I was so sick, but I forced myself to eat. I promptly threw up but ate again — It worked. I got over it," he said.

Seagoing cowboys exchange memories of their adventures on the seas and in war-torn countries. From left, Eugene Groff, Clarence Heller, and Ben Landis.

Ben Landis and Eugene Groff both went to Poland in 1946 with a shipload of bred mares.

Some of the reasons the cowboys gave for accompanying the shiploads were "wanderlust," high adventure" and "helping others."

"We talked tractors, cows, and cars the whole time — not girls, no one wanted to admit he had a girlfriend or he would have been teased unmercifully," said one cowboy.

On the voyage back, the cowboys job was to dung out the ship.

After debarking at a Savannah port, adventure was still to be had by some of the volunteers. Ben Landis said that he hitchhiked from Savannah to Newport, Va., where he boarded a train for Lancaster County.

Elmer Hertzler wrote a book about his experiences as a cowboy. Proceeds from the book sales benefit Heifer Project International. Copies of the book are available for $12.50 plus $2.50 for shipping and handling by writing to Hertzler, 433 S. Kinzers Ave., Apartment 442, New Holland, PA 17557.

Bob Longenecker shows William Longenecker the money belt, script money, and a pocket knife that he saved from his trip. "This pocket knife saved the life of a mule," he said of the time he cut the rope that was choking the mule.

Elmer Hertzler wrote a book about his experiences as a cowboy. Proceeds from the book sales benefit Heifer Project International. Copies of the book are available for $12.50 plus $2.50 for shipping and handling by writing to Hertzler, 433 S. Kinzers Ave., Apartment 442, New Holland, PA 17557.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — When Dan West, a relief worker during the Spanish Civil War, conceived the idea to provide families with resources to produce their own food rather than depend on handouts, he never imagined that $35 million would be donated annually to perpetuate his dream.

Heifer Project International (HPI) sends 22 different kinds of food- and income-producing animals to needy areas in the U.S. and other countries. The only stipulation is that recipients pass on the first female offspring to a neighbor or another country in need. HPI also provides training to help recipients care for animals by planting food, building pens, and renewing soil.

The gift of a farm animal may seem small, but it is an important step for people in need becoming self-reliant. It's the gift that keeps on giving.

When the project first began, heifers were the animal of choice. But some countries, such as the mountainous Andes, are not conducive to heifer grazing. Instead goats, llamas, guinea pigs, honey bees, and even alligators are better suited to provide food and income to people in need.

HPI goes where invited and partners with other organizations to determine the best way to help communities in need.

Jo Luck, president and chief executive officer for HPI, said

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

For the past month, I've had forsythia blooming on my dining room table. And, soon the big bush at the end of the porch will be aglow in yellow. Tiny birds have been feeding on the buds all winter, but many are left for which I'm thankful.

All winter long, bluebirds have been checking our nesting boxes. I did not realize that they didn't go south for warmer weather. We do enjoy their company as they sit on the rail fence around our yard.

When I had my last birthday, my children gave me an unusual gift. Each month since then a large box arrives in the mail and I get a new plant. They range from the more ordinary hyacinth or tulips to a miniature red rose bush, a jasmine or even a gardenia. Most of these have survived the year, but a few were lost. It is a reminder each month of their thoughtfulness.

Last weekend we had guests from Indiana. For some reason, the boys like to make tiny signs telling us to stay out of certain rooms. I really have not figured out why they do this. They really look forward to playing with their cousins on the farm.

One day, all of a sudden, we had 10 for dinner. And, this was the day that I had not given the eight-pound chicken enough time to roast. At least, I have an ample supply of frozen vegetables to feed our guests.

I've been spending all of my spare moments trying to finish the braided rug before the garden work starts. The small onions that I plant come in such large packages. When I finally pull them in July, I have a bushel of onions. I prefer smaller amounts and have noticed that now folks can buy one-half a cabbage in the store rather than one large head. Guess some others feel as I do.

Could Chocolate Be Healthy?

Chocolate is a food made from the seeds of a tropical tree called the cacoa which grow in hot, moist climates of West Africa, Indonesia, and Sri Lanka. The trees produce white and pink flowers that yield pods containing 20-50 beans, that are fermented, dried, roasted, and crushed into chocolate.

Chocolate is a plant-based food, which means it contains many nutrients, including polyphenols. Flavonoids, a subclass of polyphenols, are found in plant-based foods and research is suggesting that they may provide cardiovascular benefits and reduce the risk of some cancers. Flavornoids occur naturally in the cocoa plant, but can be decreased during the processing of chocolate products.

Research continues on whether or not there is a direct correlation between antioxidant activity and chocolate's flavonoid contents. There have also been studies completed by Mars Inc., maker of M&M's, Snickers, and Dove Bars, that polyphenols appear to inhibit LDL cholesterol oxidation, which is the "bad" cholesterol that contributes to the build-up of plague on the vessels leading to heart attack or stroke.

Despite its health claims, chocolate is not a health food. Chocolate is high in calories, saturated fat and sugar.

According to The American Dietetic Association, if you want to include chocolate in your diet, you must limit your intake of other high fat foods or cut portions. If you can make a trade-off in your diet, a small candy bar could fit into your healthy eating plan. Enjoy!

QUESTION — C. Faus wants to know how to make homemade rice cakes. She writes they are nice for wheat-free diets but expensive to buy.

ANSWER — Janet Spangler requested a recipe printed in the 1934 Watkins Cookbook (or in that year span) for chocolate pennies. Thanks to Ruth Aument, Peach Bottom, for sending a recipe.

Chocolate Fudge Pennies

4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon baking cocoa powder
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon milk
¼ teaspoon vanilla
3-4 tablespoons peanut butter

Melt butter in a small saucepan; remove from heat. Add cocoa and mix well. Stir in confectioners' sugar. Add milk, vanilla, and peanut butter, mix well. Measure level teaspoon full of mixture; roll into little balls and drop on waxed paper. Cover with another sheet of waxed paper and press each candy with a small flat spatula until it resembles the size of a coin. Refrigerate one hour. Makes about three dozen coins.

Thanks to Hilda Lewis, Dalton, for sending this recipe.

Fudgy Buttons

2 tablespoons butter (no substitutions)
1½ teaspoon baking cocoa
½ cup confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon milk
2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter

Melt butter. Add cocoa and mix well. Stir in sugar. Add milk and stir until smooth. Add peanut butter and mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper; flatten tops and shape into one-inch patties. Refrigerate until serving. Yield about 1½ dozen.

ANSWER — Rosanna Allgyer, Gap, wants canning recipes for horseradish jam and for garlic jelly. Here is one for garlic jelly from Virginia Kalp, Stahlstown, and the horseradish jelly recipe is from Marlene Ochs, Reading.

Garlic Jelly

½ cup finely chopped garlic
2 cups white-wine vinegar
3 cups water
1 package powdered pectin (used to make fruit jellies)
5½ cups sugar
¼ teaspoon vegetable oil
2 drops green liquid food coloring, optional

Bring garlic and vinegar to a boil in 2-quart saucepan. Reduce heat and keep simmering 15 minutes. Pour into glass bowl. Cover and let stand 24 hours. Pour vinegar mixture through wire-mesh strainer into 1-cup measuring cup. Press remaining liquid out of garlic with the back of a spoon; discard solids. Bring vinegar mixture, water, and dry pectin to a boil in 5-quart saucepan, stirring constantly. Add sugar; return to a boil, stirring constantly. Add oil; boil for 2 minutes more. Remove from heat and skim the foam. Add food coloring, if desired. Pour jelly into hot sterilized jars. Cover with lids, seal and process in boiling water bath for 5 minutes, or according to canning-equipment instructions. Makes 7½ pints.

Horseradish Jelly

2 cups sugar
1 cup white vinegar
¾ cup horseradish
½ bottle pectin

Boil sugar and vinegar together for 3 minutes. Stir in horseradish and bring to a boil. Remove from heat and skim. Pour into hot sterilized jars. Seal with two-piece lids and process 5 minutes in enough boiling water to cover the jars by one inch. Makes three 6-ounce jars.

ANSWER — A reader requested a recipe to make apple or cherry turnovers like those served at Arby's Restaurant. Thanks to Barb Peachey, McAlisterville, for sending a recipe.

Easy Cherry Turnovers

2 tubes refrigerated crescent rolls
1 can cherry or apple pie filling
1 cup confectioners' sugar
Little bit of milk

Unroll one tube rolls in bottom of greased 9x13-inch cake pan. Bake at 400 degrees until almost done. Remove from oven and spread pie filling over it. Top with other unrolled crescent rolls. Bake again until lightly browned. Mix together confectioners' sugar with a little milk to make a thick glaze. Drizzle over hot turnovers. Delicious served with ice cream. Yields 8 servings.

ANSWER — A Denver reader requested a recipe to make cappuccino that tastes like that sold at mini markets. Thanks to J. Gehman, Newburg, for sending a recipe.

Cappuccino

1 cup instant coffee creamer
1 cup chocolate mix such as Nestle's Quik
⅔ cup instant coffee crystals
½ cup sugar

Mix together. Use 1 tablespoon mix to 1 cup hot water. If you like spicy cappuccino, add ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg to the mix.

You can also vary the flavor by using a flavored instant coffee creamer.

ANSWER — Kandace Nealy, Newville, wanted a recipe for coconut cake, which used cream of coconut, a white cake mix, and sour cream. Thanks to Elizabeth Yoder, Meyersdale, for sending a recipe.

Coconut Sour Cream Cake

1 white cake mix
8½-ounces cream of coconut
¼ cup oil
8-ounces sour cream
3 eggs

With electric mixer, combine all ingredients in a large bowl. Pour into a greased and floured 9x13x2-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Cool.

Frosting:
2 cups powdered sugar
1 tablespoon milk
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
8-ounces heavy cream

Mix sugar, milk, and cream cheese well with electric mixer. Whip heavy cream to stiff peaks, fold into other ingredients, spread over cake and refrigerate.

Also, almost the identical recipe was sent in by Kandace except that 1 tablespoon coconut extract was added to both the cake batter and to the frosting and whipped topping was substituted for the heavy cream.

The cake should be refrigerated. The flavor of the cake is even better the next day.

ANSWER — Mildred Sickler, Falls, requested a recipe for buttermilk sugar cookies. Thanks to Jennifer Kauffman for e-mailing a recipe.

Buttermilk Sugar Cookies

1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
4½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon cream of tarter
1 cup buttermilk

Cream shortening and sugar together. Add eggs and vanilla. Sift dry ingredients together. Drop by spoonful on baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees about 10 minutes or until done.

Conflict, the mere mention of the word strikes fear in the heart of humankind. Yet, conflict is an inevitable part of every day living, especially in close relationships such as we find in families.

We are all members of a family, it may be adult-child, adult-parent, parent-child or sibling-sibling. However the family is organized there will be inevitable disagreement. Conflict is not something negative that is to be avoided, but something that should be accepted as a natural part of everyday life and essential to productive growth and change, providing it is resolved in a constructive manner.

Conflict is defined as the product or outcome generated when two or more people differ in terms of expectations, desires, and opinions. It can vary from a mild disagreement to the extreme of physical and/or emotional abuse.

Here is an example of a mild form of conflict that my friend shared with me the other day: Dale's (a pseudonym) son was ready to leave for school. As he was going out the door, his father noticed he was wearing a pair of jeans with holes in the knees and the hems frayed and torn, a tee-shirt, over which he was wearing his father's flannel shirt that hung to his knees.

Dale feels very strongly that dress influences the behavior of the individual. Therefore, he didn't want his son dressing for school as if he were going out to clean the barn. He confronted his son on his choice of clothing. You guessed it; his son expressed his difference of opinion.

"What difference does it make what I wear to school. Everyone dresses like this. I'm old enough to wear what I want to."

This is a good example of a typical conflict within a family; however, the degree to which this conflict escalates is dependent upon how skillful my friend is in managing the situation. Dale is a savvy Dad, he chose to deal with the conflict in a constructive manner. They both agreed to discuss the dress code when his son came home from school with the outcome being a negotiated compromise.

My friend's first response could have been saying, "Young man you're not leaving this house until you've changed your clothes," which would have escalated the conflict. His son would have refused to change, leading to yelling, name-calling and the ultimate parental control effort of grounding. Thus, ruining the day for both Father and Son.

It is helpful to think of conflict as a circle. It has a beginning, but if not stopped it has no end, it keeps going around. In the previous example, the school attire was the trigger around which Father and son had a difference of opinion or conflict. Dale confronted Jordon (a pseudonym), his son about his choice of clothing.

Jordon's reaction was an argumentative remark. At this point, Dale has subconsciously had a choice to make.

He can evoke an immediate emotional reaction by saying, "You're not leaving this house wearing those clothes!" That choice will accelerate the conflict. His other choice is to control his emotions and not show that he was hurt and angered by Jordon's remark, which will interrupt the conflict cycle.

Dale chose to be a responsible adult controlling his emotions. He made an appointment with Jordon to talk to him that evening about appropriate school attire. By keeping his tone light, his son would not dread the talk that night, when they would discuss the clothing situation.

Rather than becoming discouraged and frustrated, Dale is getting away from the problem and by agreeing on a designated time to reopen the discussion with his son. The time away from the intense and immediate emotions of the conflict allows time for relaxation and reflection; this break will enable both Dale and Jordon to gain new insight and perspective about the issue. The discussion can be reopened with more creative alternatives in mind.

A wise parent realizes conflict is inevitable and will utilize skills to manage it to an agreeable outcome. An equally important lesson in resolving conflict is to manage emotions. Both are critical in stopping the cycle of conflict.

Newest Milk Stars Encourage Kids To Explore Milk Flavors

EMLENTON (Clarion Co.) — Many people have already caught on to the trend of drinking flavored milk for a great tasting beverage and a more colorful mustache. Now, hip lip coloring can be seen on The Powerpuff Girls™, Dewey of "Malcolm in the Middle" and SpongeBob SquarePants in several new got milk?

Milk Mustache ads launching this spring is an effort to show kids that milk is a lot "cooler" than they may think.

Why Flavored Milk?

Kids too often reach for a can of soda or juice drinks instead of milk. This could be the reason 90 percent of teen-age girls (ages 12-19), 70 percent of preteen girls (ages 6-11) and teen-age boys (ages 12-19) and 60 percent of preteen boys (ages 6-11) do not meet their daily calcium recommendations. Experts are troubled by this statistic because a diet that is calcium deficient may help lead to stress fractures now and osteoporosis later in life. Fortunately, fun milk flavors like chocolate, banana and strawberry offer kids great taste plus a package of nutrients all in one. Drinking at least three glasses of milk a day makes it easy for kids to get the bone-building calcium and other nutrients their growing bodies need.

"Chocolate milk has always been a favorite among kids, and the dairy aisle now offers even more kid-friendly flavors like strawberry and banana. Because flavored milk has the same essential nutrients as regular milk and about half the added sugar found in regular soda and most juice drinks, parents can definitely feel good about stocking up on these nutritious new beverages," said Cindy Weimer, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

Power Up With Milk

When Cartoon Network's The Powerpuff Girls aren't fighting off the bad guys, they power up with milk to grow strong and healthy bones. Their new milk mustache print ad shows Bubbles, Blossom and Buttercup sporting the latest in milk mustache fashion — banana, chocolate and strawberry-flavors. The ad launched March 13 in Cosmo Girl and copy reads: "Banana, Chocolate and Strawberry milks are tasty and yummy with vitamins and minerals to help you play hard. Once again, the day is saved."

Another "Malcolm in the Middle" Milk Fan

Erik Per Sullivan, Dewey of "Malcolm in the Middle," looks up to big brother Malcolm who recently appeared in a milk mustache ad. And, like most little brothers, Dewey had to have what big brother's having...milk! This month Dewey appears in his own milk mustache ad sporting a chocolate flavored mustache. He wants moms to tell their kids chocolate milk is better for them than soda because milk includes nine essential nutrients growing bodies need. Dewey's ad debuted March 19 in USA Today and Time Magazine with copy that reads: "They'll drink it if they know what's good for them. Chocolate milk has the same nine essential nutrients as regular milk and is a more nutritious treat than soft drinks. Tell your kids. They're all ears."

SpongeBob's Got the Secret to Soaking Up Milk's Nutrients

Nickelodeon's SpongeBob SquarePants is "soaking up" the health benefits of chocolate milk as the latest celebrity to don a milk mustache in the popular got milk?®/Milk Mustache campaign. SpongeBob and his starfish friend, Patrick, remind kids how fun it is to drink on chocolate milk mustaches in a new television commercial and print ad. The print ad debuted in March issues of Sports Illustrated for Kids, Disney Adventures and Nickelodeon magazines with the ad copy. "Milk Mustaches don't last long when you're a sponge. Which means I may have to drink another glass of yummy chocolate milk. Or two. Or three. Or four."

Home Canning Program

BEAVER (Beaver Co.) — In recent years, canning has reemerged as a popular way to preserve food. While it is an excellent way to enjoy your favorite foods throughout the entire year, safe canning methods are important and necessary to protect your family and friends from contracting a foodborne illness.

Penn State Cooperative Extension will be conducting Blue Ribbon Basics for Canners, a program providing tips to successfully can foods and enhance chances of winning the blue ribbon at your local fair. This session will provide safety information and judging criteria for home-canned fruits, vegetables, meats, and pickled products.

The program will be conducted on Apr. 10 at Penn State Beaver in Monaca from 6:30 p.m.-8 p.m. To register, call (724) 774-3003.

Easter Treats to Decorate and Eat

There's great pleasure in making something homemade, especially when kids can join in on the project. Sharing a creative project together for Easter is also a wonderful way to start a new spring tradition for your family.

EASTER CHICK CUPCAKES

Makes 24 cupcakes

- 36 Spring Oreo or Oreo Double Stuf Chocolate Sandwich Cookies
- 1 (18.25-ounce) package yellow cake mix, batter prepared according to package directions
- 1 (16-ounce) can prepared vanilla frosting
- Decorator frosting or gel, assorted colors

1 Split cookies, leaving filling on 1 side of each cookie Coarsely chop plain split cookies; set aside. Cut 12 split cookies with filling into quarters. (You will have 24 split cookies and 48 quartered split cookie pieces, all with filling on one side)

2 Fold chopped cookie pieces into prepared cake batter Spoon batter into 24 paper-lined (2 1/2-inch) muffin-pan cups

3 Bake cupcakes according to package directions or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean Remove from pans, cool completely on wire racks

4 Frost cupcakes with prepared frosting, a few at a time Place a whole split cookie, filling side up, on each frosted cupcake. Attach 1 cookie quarter to front of whole cookie for head and another cookie quarter onto whole cookie for wing, attaching with frosting as needed Repeat with remaining cupcakes and cookies.

5 Decorate chicks with colored decorating frosting or gel as desired Let dry.

Tip: Green-tinted coconut can be sprinkled on frosted cupcakes for grass

Easter Chick Cupcakes, Crispy Marshmallow Eggs and Marshmallow Bunnies

CRISPY MARSHMALLOW EGGS

Makes 1 1/2 dozen eggs

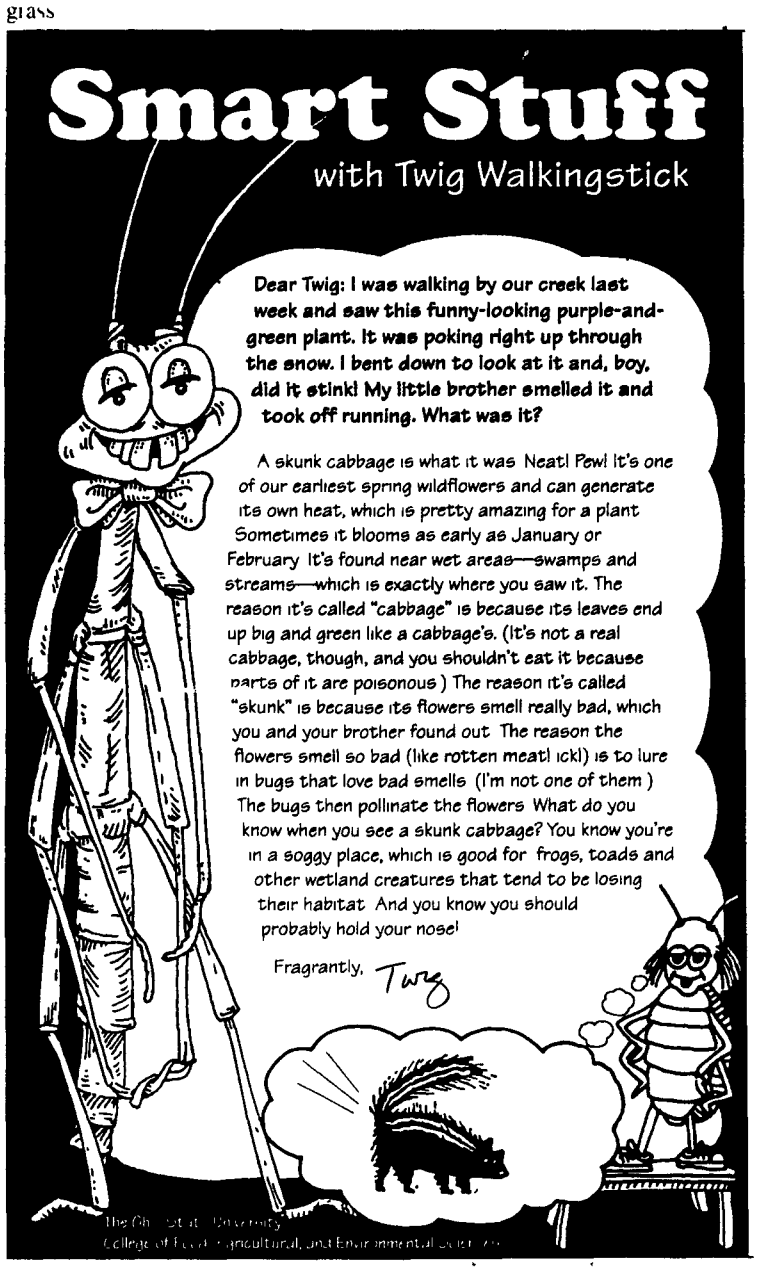
- 3 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 1 (10-ounce) package Marshmallows or 1 (10 1/2-ounce) package Miniature Marshmallows
- Food coloring, optional
- 6 cups toasted rice cereal
- Nonstick cooking spray
- Colored sprinkles, optional
- Reynolds Color Plastic Wrap
- Empty egg carton

1. Melt margarine or butter in large saucepan over low heat. Add marshmallows; stir until melted and mixture is smooth. Remove from heat. For colored eggs, add food coloring to desired shade
2. Immediately add cereal; mix lightly until well coated.
3. Spray hands with nonstick cooking spray. Working quickly, shape into 18 "eggs." Roll "eggs" in sprinkles if desired. Cool completely.
4. Place each "egg" on a 12-inch sheet of plastic wrap. Gather plastic wrap at top, twist to seal and tie with ribbon.
5. Decorate empty egg carton as desired and fill with wrapped "eggs."

Microwave: Heat margarine or butter in large microwavable bowl at HIGH (100% power) for 45 seconds or until melted. Add marshmallows; toss to coat. Microwave 1 1/2 minutes or until melted and mixture is smooth, stirring after 45 seconds. Continue as above.

Smart Stuff

with Twig Walkingstick



Dear Twig: I was walking by our creek last week and saw this funny-looking purple-and-green plant. It was poking right up through the snow. I bent down to look at it and, boy, did it stink! My little brother smelled it and took off running. What was it?
A skunk cabbage is what it was Neat! Pew! It's one of our earliest spring wildflowers and can generate its own heat, which is pretty amazing for a plant Sometimes it blooms as early as January or February It's found near wet areas—swamps and streams—which is exactly where you saw it. The reason it's called "cabbage" is because its leaves end up big and green like a cabbage's. (It's not a real cabbage, though, and you shouldn't eat it because parts of it are poisonous) The reason it's called "skunk" is because its flowers smell really bad, which you and your brother found out The reason the flowers smell so bad (like rotten meat! ick!) is to lure in bugs that love bad smells (I'm not one of them) The bugs then pollinate the flowers What do you know when you see a skunk cabbage? You know you're in a soggy place, which is good for frogs, toads and other wetland creatures that tend to be losing their habitat And you know you should probably hold your nose!
Fragrantly, Twig

MARSHMALLOW BUNNIES

Makes 2 bunnies

- 5 Marshmallows
- 2 tablespoons prepared white frosting or white chocolate chips, melted
- 2 (8-inch) pieces shoestring licorice, ribbon or string
- 10 Miniature Marshmallows
- Assorted candies or sprinkles, for decorating

1. Stack 2 large marshmallows for each bunny, securing with some frosting or melted white chocolate. Tie licorice, ribbon or string around middle of each marshmallow stack to separate head and body sections of bunny.
2. Cut remaining large marshmallow into quarters lengthwise; using some frosting or chocolate, attach 2 pieces for ears to each bunny head.
3. Attach 4 miniature marshmallows for bunny paws and 1 for a cottontail to each bunny with frosting or chocolate. Use remaining frosting or chocolate to attach candies or sprinkles to make eyes and nose for bunny faces. Let dry.

Easter Flowers

EASTER FLOWERS

Makes 12 cookie flowers

- 6 Spring Oreo or Oreo Double Stuf Chocolate Sandwich Cookies
- 4 ounces white chocolate, melted
- 12 wooden pop sticks
- 1 1/2 to 2 cups Miniature Marshmallows
- Reynolds Color Plastic Wrap

1. Split cookies, leaving filling on 1 side of each cookie. For each flower, spoon about 2 teaspoons melted white chocolate onto a wax-paper-lined cookie sheet. Center tip of 1 wooden pop stick in chocolate, turning stick to coat both sides.
2. Place 1 cookie half on top of stick, pressing down slightly so chocolate flows around edges of cookie. Attach marshmallows to edges of cookie pop to form a flower, using chocolate to hold marshmallows in place Repeat with remaining cookies and marshmallows. Refrigerate until set.
3. Center each flower on a 12-inch sheet of plastic wrap. Gather plastic wrap at pop stick, twist to seal and tie with ribbon

Flower Placecards Flowers can be used as placecards Write names on flowers with decorator gel or frosting Refrigerate until set

Garden Centerpiece· Stand several flowers, with and without names, in a large planter fitted with florist foam Top foam with crumpled green plastic wrap to simulate grass

Pennsylvania State Grange Select New Young Couple

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — If opposites attract, then it is no surprise that Ken and Wendy Kershner are married.

In fact, it is those differences that make their relationship so strong.

"We compliment each other very well," Ken said. "Those areas where she is strong, I am weaker. But we also have similar interests and enjoy the simpler things in life."

It's no surprise that they would have different opinions as how to promote the Grange and its youth department as the 2001-2002 young married couple.

The Kershners, who belong to Alleghenyville Grange, Berks County, were selected as the new couple at the Youth/Young Marrieds Weekend Conference in Hershey.

Pennsylvania State Grange Young Couple Ken and Wendy Kershner combine strengths to promote Grange.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization dedicated to improving life in rural Pennsylvania through legislative grass-roots policies, offering member services and performing community service. The Youth Program is for members ages 14-35 and is designed to develop leadership skills through the various programs offered by the Grange's youth department.

Wendy, 26, believes in reaching out to new members while Ken, 32, feels Grangers should concentrate on encouraging current members, who may be inactive, to start participating again, and then work toward securing new members.

"We may have separate goals, but they are unified in the fact that they both are to the benefit of the Grange," Wendy said.

Both agree that membership growth is their primary goal in the coming year.

"It is our attitude to do the best we can since we had this honor bestowed upon us." Ken said. "We could do nothing and just sit on it, but that wouldn't do the honor any justice."

The Kershners, who live in Adamstown, Lancaster County, have decided to attend as many open house meetings as possible, as well as the 2001 National Grange Session in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the State Session in Altoona, and the 2002 Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Both feel fortunate to be involved in Grange since it was at Youth Camp that they first met. One year later, both attended (separately) the wedding of a fellow Grange member and started dating shortly thereafter.

A year after getting married in 1995, their first son, Casey, was born and was joined by brother Conlan in 2000.

The couple, who are active in their Subordinate Grange as well as the Pomona Youth program, believes there is a tremendous opportunity for the youth to build membership.

"When you have people with similar backgrounds, similar moral values, and similar interests, being involved in the Grange makes it easier for you to meet," Wendy said. "When I look at our friends or the people we do things with, they are Grange members. These people are going to be our friends for life."

Those are just a few reasons why the Kershners say the Grange is an important part of their lives. Moreover, they feel there is something for everyone in the Grange.

"If you gave me a list of your top three interests, it would be pretty tough not to find at least one Grange activity that wouldn't match your interests," Ken said.

Wendy, who works part-time at Lasting Image in Sinking Springs, is publicity and youth chairman and lady assistant steward at Alleghenyville Grange while Ken is assistant steward and past Pomona lecturer and past member of the finance committee. Ken's hobbies include collecting milk bottles, playing and watching sports, and spending time with the children while Wendy enjoys gardening, reading non-fiction, going to yard sales and playing volleyball.

Speakers, Mentors Educate Students About Career Opportunities

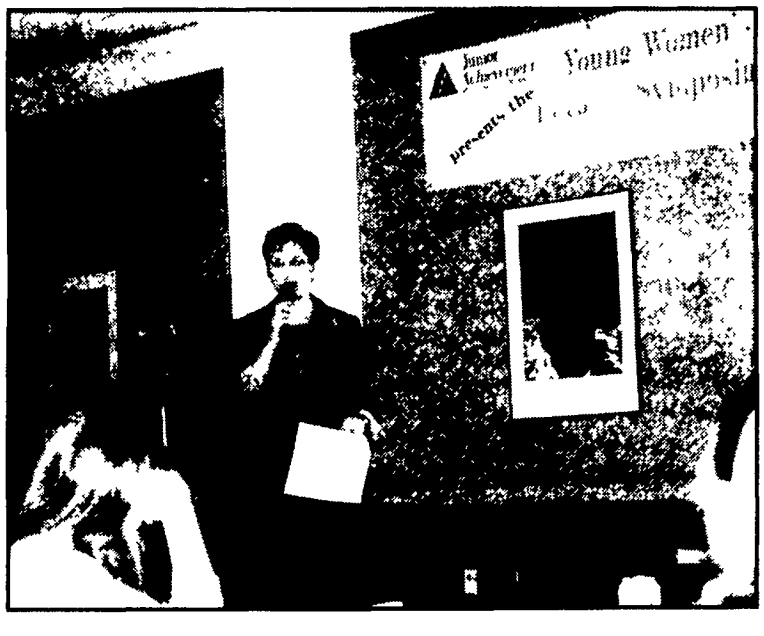
MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — For a high school student, the choice of a college and career direction are extremely intimidating. Thanks to a recent symposium, about 120 high school girls had the chance to hear about professional jobs firsthand.

Recently high school girls and over 60 local professional women participated in the fifth annual Young Women's Futures Symposium held at Millersville University.

The events of the symposium pointed girls toward planning for their future and learning about interviewing attire, goal setting, and developing a career path. They also received encouragement to consider skill careers, and a panel discussion.

In the morning discussion participants learned that farming is another career option may be in their future as it was for Dale Smith, co-owner/operator of King and Queen Farm, Denver. Panelists also included Cindy Rowe-Taylor, president of Cindy Rowe Auto Glass, Lois Groshong, project manager with Charles Groshong Co., and Lisa Cooper Cotter, owner of a building company.



Dana Zamolyi, deputy direct of the Pennsylvania Commission for Women (PCW), was the keynote speaker for the recent Young Women's Futures Symposium at Millersville Univesity.

Dana Zamolyi, deputy director of the Pennsylvania Commission for Women (PCW) was the keynote speaker. "Winding paths don't always end up the way we thought they would, even though we have goals," she said. "Life will throw you obstacles and curves. Look at them as gifts — lessons along the way. Challenges come so we can grow and be prepared for things we are not equipped to handle now," said Zamolyi.

Smith shared how she became a dairy farmer because not born on a dairy farm. She stressed that she wasn't from a farm and that "you never know where the road will lead."

A self-described "city girl" from Trenton, N.J., Smith grew up in suburbs. A plant science major at Rutgers University, she got her first exposure to dairy cows when she showed a cow for the block and bridle club.

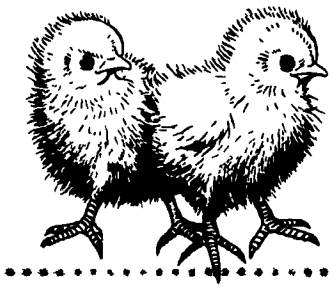
This experience helped her to become more interested in agriculture and the dairy world. She also had experience as a nature instructor for the Salvation Army Day Camp for inner-city children, which included educating the students about agriculture.

At a field trip to a dairy farm she met, and later married, Thomas Smith. Later she wrote articles and edited copy for a Holstein publication. The family moved from New Jersey to Pennsylvania in 1988. The farm has 130 acres and a herd of 110. Her job responsibilities include record keeping/accounting, herd health, forage production planning and calf raising.

Smith, the mother of four children, also shared with the audience the challenges and unique opportunity of raising her son Brian, a Down's syndrome child.

During the afternoon luncheon 57 mentors shared their own life and career experiences with 116 students from Lancaster, Lebanon, Dauphin, and Northumberland counties. As a mentor Lancaster Farming's staff writer Michelle Ranck taught students about her own career path as she became involved in the agriculture journalism field.

The symposium was originated by Junior Achievement of Central Pennsylvania to encourage and meet the needs of high school girls.



Jo Luck, president of Heifer Project International, said the project offers hope, education, dignity, and self-reliance to people in need.

Stamp Out Hunger

that more than 120,000 doners participated last year, and the organization was able to pass on thousands of animals. HPI was thrust into the national limelight when a book "Beatrice's Goat," which captures the story of an HPI recipent, hit the New York Times best seller list and when the Oprah Show aired a short segment about HPI.

"Within 24 hours, $165,000 was donated to HPI after Oprah first mentioned HPI, and the second time her comments resulted in $300,000 in donations.

"Celebrity interest has really helped," Luck said. At the same time, Luck said the donations are only one small stem in the need to stamp out world hunger.

"The challenge is that some people may think they have $38 million, HPI doesn't need me," Luck said. "But there is still a great need — hunger is worldwide."

Every little bit enables the non-profit organization to help stamp out hunger.

Last week, HPI conducted two separate banquets in Lancaster County. Luck entertained audiences with stories of her travels to third world countries.

Luck said HPI's goal is to place 120,000 animals annually with different families.

Heifer International is based in Little Rock, Arkansas, but gifts should be sent to HPI, P.O. Box 98175, Washington, D.C. 20090-8175. For more information, call (800) 422-0474.

Food Insight

Why do some sugar-free foods use more than one type of sugar substitute?

Sugar substitutes, also known as "very low-calorie sweeteners" or "intense sweeteners," are often combined in order to produce a taste that most closely mimics that of real sugar and because together they produced an improved simulation of a sugar-like taste than either one could achieve alone. "By combining sweeteners, a very precise taste can be achieved, aftertastes can be controlled, and costs can be optimized," said Mark Kantor, Ph.D., associate professor in the Department of Nutrition and Food Science at the University of Maryland. Combining sweeteners can result in a synergistic effect that also allows the food manufacturer to use less total sweetener overall — up to 40 percent less — without compromising taste. Sometimes sweeteners are blended to obtain the best qualities of each, such as heat stability and the ability to retain sweetness over time.

Why are some reduced-fat products not much lower in calories than their regular-fat versions?

"When replacing fat in a food with something else, there is a net decrease in caloric value — after all, fat packs nine calories per gram — more than proteins or carbohydrates," said Manfred Kroger, Ph.D., professor emeritus of Food Science at the Pennsylvania State University. However, there are a few reasons why reduced-fat foods aren't necessarily much lower in calories than their full-fat counterparts.

First, reduced-fat products are not the same as fat-free products — some may have only a slight reduction in fat compared to a reference food. Second, some ingredients used to reduce the amount of fat in foods are truly fat- and calorie-free products are not the same as fat-free products — some may have only a slight reduction in fat compared to a reference food. Second, although some ingredients used to reduce the amount of fat in foods are truly fat- and calorie-fat (such as olestra, which is not absorbed by the body and which therefore contributes no calories), most of these ingredients contain from one to five calories per gram. Finally, in order to make a reduced-fat food have the same weight per serving as the regular-fat version (as required by the Food and Drug Administration), other ingredients must be added to the product, or a larger portion of the product must be considered as a serving. The additional ingredients contribute calories, and naturally, a larger portion of food per serving would also increase the number of calories per serving.

Here's a simple example: removing one gram of fat from a typical cracker would lower the number of calories by nine. However, in reality, the inclusion of a fat replacer would add calories back, resulting in a net reduction of perhaps four calories per gram of fat removed.

Do reduced-fat baked goods have extra sugar added to them?

Sugar does make up a larger percentage of reduced-fat and fat-free foods.

Why?

One reason is that when an ingredient is removed from a product, the remaining ingredients in the product becomes, in effect, more "concentrated," In other words, even though the total amount of sugar is the same in both the regular and reduced-fat or fat-free version of a food, the proportion of sugar in the lower-fat version is greater. In some cases, when fat is removed from a food, carbohydrate-based fat-replacer ingredient is added, which may also contribute to a higher "sugars' value on the product's nutrition label.

Meal Time Matters

It's important that families eat meals together. This is hard to do because of our busy lifestyles. Here are some conversation starters for families. Try it at your next family meal, or try turning off the television and just visit for awhile using these ideas:

- Describe something that happened recently that made you feel really happy.
- Someone gave you $1,000. You have to spend some of it on your family before you can buy anything for yourself. What would you buy for everyone?
- If you could live in a different place and time, where and when would you want it to be?
- If you could spend an afternoon with a famous person (living or dead), who is your choice?

Kitchen Kaper Tulip Tour Offers Ideas Galore

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — On Mon., Apr. 30, 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m., the Woman's Club of Ephrata will conduct its popular kitchen house tour. Additionally, a craft show at the Ephrata Church of the Brethren (no admission charge or tour tickets are necessary for the craft show), is planned. The tour includes six privates homes, two Ephrata churches, and the Eicher House and Museum.

Restaurant chefs will offer samples of their fare at each of the homes. Additionally, floral decor will be displayed by florists and decorators.

Tickets for the tour, for all ages including children, are $10. Send a self-addressed business-size envelope, along with your check, made out to Woman's Club of Ephrata to either of the following members: Edith Graff, 39 School Lane, Stevens, PA 17578, 336-4719; Marion Shook, 936 Dawn Ave., Ephrata, PA 17522, 733-7677. The club also advises comfortable walking shoes. No high heels, cameras or baby carriages will be allowed. The following stops are on the tour:

• Ephrata Church of the Brethren, 201 Crescent Ave., Ephrata.

On display here are beautiful hand-crafted items, such as redware pottery, stained glass, kaleidoscopes, crafts, and dip mixes.

• Mr. and Mrs. Fred Buch, 1107 W. Main St., Ephrata.

This two-story brick, modified French Colonial, was built by Isaac Hacker in 1969. The random width oak flooring, chair railing, and window trim was copied from an historic Philadelphia home. The living room is furnished with antiques. The dining room cupboards are filled with a collection of historic Transfer China, started when Fred was 11-years-old. The kitchen by Rutt is of cherry wood raised panel doors. A large concert organ resides in the family room. Flower decor by Black Iris and food samples by Lincoln House.

• Mr. and Mrs. Abram Leaman, 79 Bethany Rd., (Ephrata Manor).

This Cape Cod is an eight-room, 1½ story home, built in the 1970s. It was completely renovated last year. Colors in the home are blue to mauve, with sand-colored carpeting and woodwork. The kitchen is well-equipped, light and spacious, leading to the deck. The living room, with numerous collections, includes a collection of fashion dolls, dressed from the 1900s to the present. Decor by Floral Productions and food by Sunset Diner.

• Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Gardner, 214 Lyndan Lane, Lititz.

A new two-story brick home, features a large foyer with wooden memorabilia, small desk and animals, many made by Mrs. Gardner and her grandfather. The kitchen is the center of family gathering with an island, walk-in pantry, and a bird house chest of drawers. The living room, dining room and family room complete the first floor. On the second floor, the children's rooms are decorated with a jungle wall mural and Nascar souvenirs. The master bedroom/bath has a dual black marble fireplace, handmade Shaker furniture, and a whirlpool tub. Decor by Esbenshade Florists and food by Black Horse Restaurant.

• Mrs. Cleo Weaver, 19 Main St., Akron.

The open modern floor plan makes this house, built in 1995, very family-oriented. Double doors open into the large family room with a gas fireplace and French doors. The kitchen truly is the hub of this home with Cathedral ceilings and white cabinets. The large eating area, looking over the beautifully landscaped pool, makes lunchtime a great experience. Those who are interested in going downstairs can enjoy the newly-decorated rec room. Decor by Joanne Pike, interior decorator, and food by Akron Restaurant.

• Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Laird, 275 Cocalico Rd., Lititz.

This house was built in the 1890s and was purchased by the couple because the master of the house had a dream to remodel an old house and make it a lovely home, so it's a work in progress. The kitchen and laundry room have just been completed. All the closets, bathrooms, baseboards, framing, book cases, etcetera have been done by the Lairds themselves. You'll enjoy getting some ideas for your own projects. Hats off to this couple. Decor by Royer's Flowers and food by Fox Chase Golf Club.

• Mrs. Ruth Ann Krall, 216 Sand Ct., Ephrata.

The visitor enters the living room of this spacious Brickyard townhouse, which is functional for Mrs. Krall's large, visiting families. Throughout the home, the antiques have been chosen and saved as family heirlooms. Exquisite needlework, created by Mrs. Krall's late mother and art work from other members of the family, is found throughout the home. The open kitchen is furnished with a table, formerly belonging to her great-grandfather. The table opens to seat 20 people when needed. A den, adjoining the kitchen, is furnished with a green wicker set, which was once the living room set in a grandparent's home.

• First Methodist Church, 68 N. Church St., Ephrata.

The Rev. James Carver will describe the beautiful stained glass windows of the church. Depicted here are the scenes from both the Old and New Testaments and the life of Christ from the Enunciation to the Resurrection.

• Eicher House and Museum, Ephrata Park.

Restored in 1983, the Eicher House was originally the Sisters' House of the Cloisters. This historic building and museum provides a forum which enables the citizens of the area to participate in various cultural activities. Tour participants are invited to stop, rest and enjoy cookies and coffee. Flowers are presented by the Eicher volunteers.

Berks Society 6

Berks Society of Farm Women Group 6 met at the home of Janet Schlegel. A swap lunch was enjoyed by the seven members present.

Later, the group met at the Shanesville Hotel for an Everybody's Birthday Party at the Shanesville Hotel. Each member brought a $5 gift. After lunch gifts were exchanged. President Naomi West called the meeting to order with the question: Where did you and your husband go on your first date?

At the next meeting, the group will tour the Sunsweet Plant, Fleetwood, and have lunch at the Dryville Hotel, Dryville.

Members have also served a meal twice a week to the Paul Youse family, who had a serious farm accident.

The group planned a tour to the Flower Warehouse and Weaver's Store with lunch at Shady Maple.

Spring Rally will be held at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland, May 16, 10 a.m. Tickets are $18 per person.

Members also made plans for the annual pot pie dinner at Oley Valley High School.

The society plans to present $50 to the outstanding youth in vocational agriculture at Oley Valley High School.

N.Y. Bill Would Require Country Of Origin Labeling

ALBANY, N.Y. — Assembly Agriculture Committee Chairman, Bill Magee (D-Nelson) has introduced legislation requiring retailers to display the country of origin on meat and veal products as well as vegetables and produce.

Carol Gillis, executive director of New York Beef Industry Council, and Lorrell Kenney, director of promotions prepare veal bacon at the New York Restaurant and Foodservice Show. More than 20,000 people attended the show and had a chance to taste veal bacon and sausage, which fills a niche for consumers on a quest for a healthy product that does not forego taste.

"In this day and age of internal trade and wide open markets, it is only fair and reasonable that New York consumers know where the food they are eating was grown or raised," Magee commented.

Magee noted, that New York State has the most stringent of food health and safety standards as well as one of the finest research institutions in the world in Cornell University, so if food products were not grown, raised and produced in this state and country then the public should be made aware.

"The bottom line is that with more and more meat, vegetables and produce being imported from countries with dubious health standards, the consumers of New York have a right to know where the food they are feeding their families is being produced," Magee said.

This bill also acts as a marketing tool for farmers as it could work in conjunction with other programs that promote New York products such as the Pride of New York Program. There is little doubt that farmers are willing to purchase locally grown products if they are appropriately labeled and if they also know that alternative is to buy apple juice made with concentrate from China or onions that were grown in Chile.

"Our farmers grow the very best apples, onions, carrots, grapes and raise the very best livestock so we should not be hiding the fact that the grocery stores and supermarkets are importing products instead adhering to a locally grown, locally know standard," Magee remarked.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 met March 17 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Swarr, Landisville. Several members substituted for officers who were absent. Ruth Rohrer acted as president for the business meeting. Hostesses were Rose Ann Wade and Heidi Ebersole.

Violet's Theme Gardening and 80 slides showed roses, topiary, evergreens, hollies, and other plants. Suggestions were presentef for using 12-inch flagstone paths through flower beds to enable gardeners to better groom the beds. Dennis Wade showed how to make a flower pot bird feeder or bird bath. Two members celebrating birthdays were given a pair of latex gloves for gardening.

A bus trip is planned for late spring. Contact Susie Wissler for more information at (717) 898-7233.

UD Botanic Gardens To Hold Plant Sale

NEWARK, Del. — Just in time to add real pizzazz to local gardens, the University of Delaware Botanic Gardens (UDBG) will hold its annual plant sale on Sat., Apr. 28, at 9 a.m.-4 p.m. across from the Fischer Greenhouse on South College Avenue in Newark. The sale offers hard-to-find native plants well-suited to local growing conditions as well as more common trees, shrubs and perennials.

This year's sale features spectacular yellow magnolia and popular, long-lasting buddleia, or butterfly bush.

The yellow magnolias, ranging in color from pale and creamy to dark and golden, grow well in a variety of soils and flourish in full sun to partial shade. They are easy to maintain, grow quickly and flower in a short time. Eight varieties of healthy, 2- to 3-year-old grafted plants are offered, priced from $25 to $55.

Old favorite and new varieties of buddleias bring a riot of bold color and heady fragrance to the garden. The aptly-named "butterfly bush" draws not only butterflies but bees, moths and even hummingbirds to drink in its fragrant flower nectar. The floral color display, in shades of lavender, violet, pink, white, and yellow, begins as early as March and lasts well into September. Twelve varieties of buddleia are offered, all at $15.

Proceeds from the sale fund internships at the UDBG and other horticulture research programs aimed at educating local gardeners.

Antiques Center

Family Opens Antiques-Filled Home April 30

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Although Fred Buch grew up in a home where family heirlooms were passed down from generation and nothing was ever thrown out, he credits a reclusive old gentleman for giving him advice that set the course of his life: "Don't be like all those other kids who waste their money on hot rods. Take my advice and buy all the dark blue china you can find, and you'll never regret it."

At 12 years of age, Buch purchased his first piece of the historical transfer china that is made with copper engravings of pictures that are transferred by ink onto china. Every bit of money Buch could scrap together went to buy pieces that depict historical American events and scenes.

Buch wrote to antiques dealers and purchased many pieces through the mail. The dealers had no idea they were dealing with a 12 year old. Several years later Buch was invited to the Philadelphia Antiques Show to meet with several dealers. They were flabbergasted to find that one of their steady clients was a mere boy. He became a celebrity of sorts, and Buch admits that at dealer auctions, the older dealers were inclined to stop bidding when they saw "the boy" bidding. He found favor with them, and they sometimes gave him preferential treatment. Although still interested in collecting, Buch couldn't afford to buy much when he was a student at a New Jersey prep school and later at the Westminster Choir College at Princeton. One couple had accumulated a rare set of six cups and saucers. They insisted Buch take the set and pay for it whenever he could afford it.

Buch has many stories to accompany the hundreds of pieces that are displayed in several large Dutch cupboards. Some of those pieces he purchased for $6 are now worth hundreds of dollars. Rare pieces such as a compote is worth $2,400.

"I'm glad I got started on china, it can't be reproduced accurately," Buch said of the many reproductions and fake pieces that frustrate furniture antique dealers.

Buch and his wife Ruth are opening their home for the Ephrata Women's annual Kitchen Kaper Tulip Tour, April 30. Not only will tour participants be able to see Buch's extensive collection of china, but also wonderful family heirlooms, and their unique home.

"We decided to build a new "old" house," Mrs. Buch said of the 1969 endeavor. At that time the Buchs had been searching for an old house to fix up, but couldn't find the right one in the area they wanted.

Buch's uncle Ike W. Hacker built the home using beams, lintel log, corner cupboard, wide oak floor boards, and custom milled work that were torn out of old buildings. What they could not find was built into the house, such as the walk-in fireplace, cypress woodwork. Because the Buchs wanted thick walls with deep windowsills, the house was built with cement blocks to the attic, the outside totally covered with brickwork, and the inside studded out. The interior is painted in colors of historical Philadelphia buildings.

The home is furnished with many family pieces that go back several generations. These include several old tavern tables (dated between late 1600s-1700s), a spool cabinet that was in the General Store in Lincoln, two grandfather's clocks, one built by William Fraser in 1839 and the other by Jacob Eyer, Hamburg, in 1830.

Buch had a great aunt who never married and lived with them until her death at 107 years. Many of her pieces are incorporated into the home's decor. These include an 1806 chest and many family frakturs of birth certificates, marriages, and baptismals. Three family bibles, one dated to the 1700s.

One unusual fraktur shows his great grandmother's penmanship paper on one side. On the other side of the paper, her teacher wrote a fraktur as a reward. They estimate that it was done in 1830.

Some other unique items include an inlaid desk, corner chair, cradle and doll of great aunt, and Buch's grandmother's show towels, showing her needlework proficiency. The towels, stitched in 1844-1851 were never intended to be used but to show.

Mrs. Buch has an extensive collection of Leeds or creamware. They also have china in late and early Adam's rose pattern. The couple attend three to four auctions and one antiques show monthly in search of pieces to add to their collections and to find some pieces for the Hacker House, an antiques store in Lincoln that they own, also for the antiques show sponsored by the Ephrata Historical Society, which Buch manages.

The Buch's home was built with an organ chamber with speakers and a conduit in the Fred and Ruth Buch sit in front of their walk-in fireplace. Their uniquely-built home filled with many family heirlooms and antiques will be open for tour April 30.

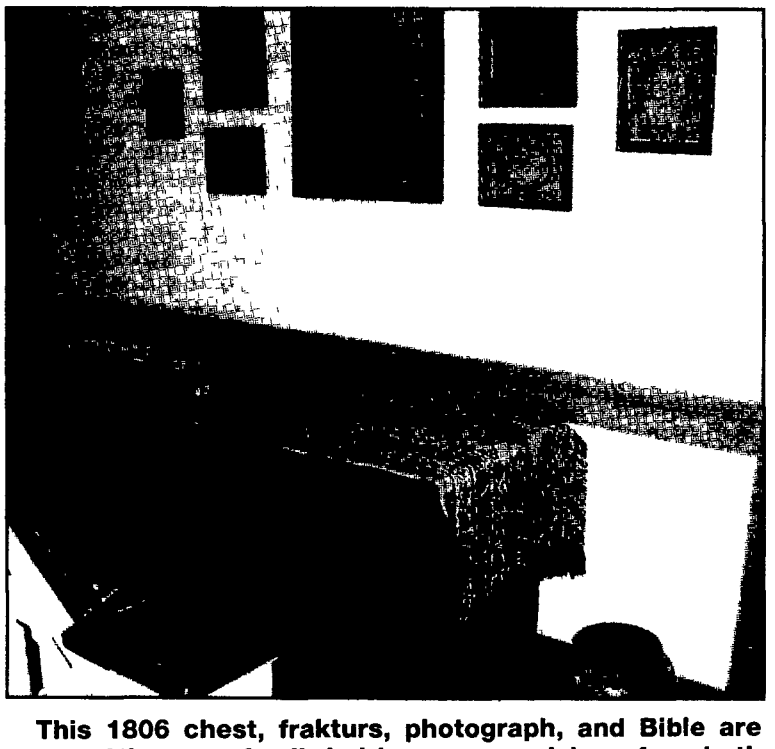
Buch began collecting transfer dark blue china when he was only 12 years old. Most of the plates that sold for $15-$35 then are now $400-$500 each. Rare pieces such as a compote sells for $2,400.



This 1806 chest, frakturs, photograph, and Bible are some of the many family heirlooms passed down from both sides of the family. The Buch home is a wonderful example of how to incorporate family heirlooms into the decorating scheme.

This corner cupboard was salvaged from an old house that was demolished.

Questions & Answers

My mother always treasured a tiny, light blue glass slipper that had belonged to her mother. It has a cat's head on the front and overall small, raised dots. Is it a treasure?

D.S.G. — Atlanta, Ga.

Many of these Victorian glass novelties were made, and glass slippers have been reproduced over the years. However, since yours has been handed down in the family, it would be authentic and could have a shop value of around $50 or more.

I have several prints by such American illustrators as Leyendecker, A.B. Frost and Charles Dana Gibson that I wish to sell. I need an idea of value and where to sell.

L.G. — Iowa

Evaluating illustrator prints depends on appeal of the subject, popularity of the artist and condition. Write to "Illustrator Collector's News, P.O. Box 1958, Sequim, Washington, 98382.

I have an old bowl and pitcher set marked on the bottom "Etruria, Mellor & Co." with an anchor in a circle. The set is white with rose color flowers and embossed around the top, handle, etc. Any idea of age?

Your wash bowl set is one of many made in America at the end of the 19th century. Similar sets sell in shops for around $200 or more.

I recently came across my late father's waiter's jacket from the many years he was a waiter on the Rock Island Line railroad. It has a patch with the logo. Any value other than sentimental?

T.C. — Evanston, Ill.

Your jacket is part of historical railroadiana. A collector would value it at around $50.

In the basement of an old house, we recently bought, and are restoring we came across a soup ladle. It has a mottled surface in blue and gray and some chips. Somebody told me it is graniteware. What is that and is it worth anything?

Graniteware was first made in 1876 and has never stopped being made. It was made of different minerals coated with enamel. The effect of speckled mottling and swirling made it resemble granite. Condition and colors determine value. Your ladle is a common color and in good condition. It could sell in a shop for $100.

I found an interesting letter opener at the flea market. It is celluloid with a painted rooster head and "H.K. Kellogg" incised on the blade. Is this the name of the person who designed it? I paid $5. What is it worth?

L.M.M. — Cincinnati, Ohio

You have an advertising premium probably made for Kellogg cereal. In the recent Schroeder price guide it has a possible dealer price of $120.

Colorful Old Glass Oil Lamps Are Pricey Beauties

Even in this electronic age collectors are rediscovering the beauty and practicality of mid-19th century glass fluid lamps. Many are examples of American glass-cutter art at its finest showing different techniques and colors.

As a recent Skinner auction proved, collectors and dealers are willing to pay thousands of dollars over estimate, especially if there is an attribution to the Boston & Sandwich Glass Company. One cut double overlay glass fluid lamp, with that attribution, in cobalt blue to white cut to clear sold over the estimated $1,500-$2,500 for a whopping $29,900. Others sold over estimate for $28,750 and $10,350.

During the mid-19th century, the lamps were made in a variety of pressed patterns in both clear and colored glass, or colored cut glass. In the 1840s, American glass makers took note of the popularity of colored cut and overlay lamps made in Bohemia. Colors were ruby, cobalt blue, green, and red.

Both the Boston & Sandwich Company, and the New England Glass Company made hundreds that burned whale-oil and later kerosene. Fancy designs in cut glass were made from the 1850s until around 1905. Rare colors like purple always get top dollar. Clear lamps with patterns can still be had for a couple of hundred dollars at auction.

Clues: Many collectors see them not so much as lamps, but examples of early American glass. Collecting the many patterns in both cut and pressed glass lamps in clear, color and milk glass often can be identified by the same names as tableware pressed glass.

Reproductions abound in some of the most popular patterns and colors. Among them red cranberry glass in the coin dot pattern. Also reproduced were whale-oil lamps in colored, pressed pattern glass. Repros can be recognized when the mold seam runs, unbroken, from top to bottom through the disk between the font and stem.

The earliest glass fluid lamps were simple in design. The base held an oval font top with a brass or pewter cap. A rough pontil mark on the base helps identify them. Those made from 1810 to 1860 were free-blown.

The design of many lamp bases changed with the discovery of new and better lighting fuels. The earliest ones used whale oil and camphine.

Petroleum use started in the United States in 1859. This cheaper fuel made lamp bases an important new industry. Until the Civil War, hundreds of lamps were made in a variety of styles. By the 1870s until the advent of electricity, the rather smelly kerosene lamps were popular.

Another innovation was the "Fairy lamp," considered a great advance in lighting in the 1870s. If you didn't know any better, you wouldn't recognize it as a lamp at all. Short, fat, one-or-two wick candles with a glass shade were set into bases of china, metal or glass. If you are lucky, you may spot one in a nailsea or Burmese glass pattern. Others worth keeping an eye out for may have a rainbow satin or mother-of-pearl shade. If the lamp is signed by the Clarke Company of England, who originated the style, you've got a winner.

Because of price and rarity, today's collectors are more attracted to those made in the late 19th century. Not only are the colors and shapes varied, but many of the finishes are unusual. For instance, the use of mercury-glass made in the 1850s combined various colors with copper-wheel engraving. As rarities, they can cost $500 or more.

April Is National Auctioneers Month

Auctions are interesting "people" events — and have been for centuries. In fact, it's hard to imagine anything that is not sold at auction. Livestock, automobiles, real estate, antiques — you name it, and auctioneers have successfully sold it.

Auctions are as modern as today's technology, yet as old as mankind. Recorded history describes auctions in 500 B.C., and later during the Roman Empire. The "Oxford English Dictionary" of 1595 is the earliest English reference to the auction. And everything has been selling well at auction ever since.

The most widely recognized talent of the auctioneer is undoubtedly his or her ability to "talk fast."

The rhythmic chant, developed over the decades as a means of creating excitement and moving the sale of property at a steady pace, is certainly the attention — getter on auction day. But the success of an auctioneer depends upon many other factors.

The professional auctioneer is first and foremost a marketing specialist. In order to best serve clients, the auctioneer must have a working knowledge of the value of the items being offered. The auctioneer must know how to use advertising to attract the people most interested in your property. That stimulates competition, thus securing the best possible results for the seller. Professional auctioneers are also versed in the Uniform Commercial Code, and, they are experts in the psychology of selling.

The auctioneer wants the seller to be satisfied with the final bids received. At an "absolute" auction, each item goes to the highest bidder regardless of the bidding price, but — if the seller requires it — there are alternative methods by which his or her interests can be further protected.

With real estate, for example, the property may be absolute or subject to the owner confirmation." This means the seller has the right to accept or reject the final bid. The seller may also choose to sell the property "with reserve." Here an item is identified as being offered with reserve, or a minimum amount the seller is willing to accept for the property.

These techniques protect the seller, but they are also fair to bidders because they are fully explained before the auction gets under way.

You've all heard the old story walls. During the tour, organ music will be played.

Lincoln House will serve food samples in the Buch's cherry kitchen.

The tour offers people the rare privilege of seeing how antiques and family heirlooms are displayed in a home setting.

The Buch home is one of six private homes open for tour. Homes depict a variety of styles and are decorated by floral designers. At each place a chef will offer samples of food representative of the local restaurant they are representing.

Tickets for the April 30 tour, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. must be purchased in advance. Send a self-addressed business-size envelope, along with your check of $10 for every person, made out to Woman's Club of Ephrata. Send to Edith Graff, 39 School Lane, Stevens, PA 17578. For more details, call Edith at (717) 336-4719.

National Auctioneers Month

— and you've seen it acted out in countless sitcoms and commercials — about the fellow who attended an auction, scratched his nose or sneezed and came home with an item he hadn't intended to buy. Well, don't be frightened away by such tales. The auctioneer realizes when you are bidding and when you are not.

The rapid-fire chant of the auctioneer, though a familiar sound throughout the land, remains a mystery to many. In simplest terms, the chant is merely a series of numbers connected by "filler" words to give the buyer time to think between bids. Rhythm is as important as speed in developing an effective chant, but nothing is more vital than clarity. Auctioneers will adjust their speed, depending on the bidding experience level of their crowd. The numbers in a good chant will be easily understood.

Remember, the auctioneer's intent in chanting quickly is not to confuse bidders. Confused bidders who get frustrated aren't going to be repeat customers at auctions, and the auctioneer knows that. The quick chant is part of what makes auctions so unique, and is intended to help move the sale along so that a large number of items can be sold in a short amount of time.

The auction method of marketing has proved an effective price — setting mechanism that takes into account current market variables.

That's true for whatever commodity is being sold. The pricing of such raw materials as grain, tobacco and wool is directly tied to the auction block, yet the auctioneer's gavel also helps establish the value of more glamorous commodities such as fine art, antiques and classic automobiles.

The objectivity and fairness of a well — run auction is often favored by the courts to carry out their decrees and by executors and trustees to help fulfill their responsibilities. The legal presumption is that a public auction of property to the highest bidder is a sale among disinterested third parties.

At an auction, buyers get exactly what they want, and at a cost of one bid higher than someone else was willing to pay!

The auction. Whether you are a seller or a buyer, it's a great alternative!

MAGEE AUCTION
SAT., APR. 14th at 10 AM
CABIN RETREAT &
7 APPRVD BLDG LOTS
RYE TWP, PERRY COUNTY

Directions: From Rt 81 - Take the Marysville exit (#21), Rt 11/15 North, approx two miles to Marysville. Turn left onto Rt 850 West approx 5.8 mi. to Idle Rd. Signs posted to auction. Seven building lots, approved for sand mound septic systems and having road frontage either on Rt 850, Karl Palm Ave, Idle or Sawmill Rds, will be offered singly, with reserve, at 10 AM. The lots being offered vary in size from 1.65 to 37 acres and are part of the Karl Palm Estate Subdivision in Rye Twp, Perry Co.

Special note: Also being offered with reserve, and as a separate parcel, is a 24 acre wooded tract improved with a rustic (no conveniences) lot cabin, two pavilions, and a covered barbeque. Fishing Creek runs through this tract and there is also a small spring fed pond. The cabin is in a secluded and picturesque setting at the end of Sawmill Rd and would make an ideal private family retreat.

Terms for real estate: 10% down in cash or certified funds will be due at knockdown with the balance due at settlement. Picture ID req'd for bidder number. Additional terms & conditions will be announced auction day.

Auctioneer's note: These lots present a unique opportunity to obtain prime rural home sites within the Harrisburg commuting area. If you are planning to build in this area, you should inspect this offering.

9th Annual American Lineback Dairy Cattle Sale

APRIL 28, 2001

12:00 Noon
(In conjunction with Belleville's Spring Heifer Sale)
Approximately 80 head from baby calves to fresh cows

Most of these individual Lineback breeders have been breeding purebreds or crossbreeding Linebacks for over 20 years to produce more milk and larger animals.

Linebacks are a well-marked dairy cow. Come and look at our animals. We will have some 4-H show calves, heifers and cows for small family farms as well as producers for large dairies and a few breeding bulls.

BUSINESS ❖ NEWS

Show-Ease Honors Three

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Show-Ease Stall Company honored three employees for 20-plus years of service at its banquet in Jan.

Tom Livengood provides service for Badger, Hanson, and Silomatic unloaders and has worked for Show-Ease since October 1979. Mahlon Shenk is a welder/shop foreman and fabricates Show-Ease stalls, headlocks, gates, etc. and has worked for Show-Ease since April 1977.

Aaron Kolb cuts, bends and paints pipe for Show-Ease stall projects and is in charge of UPS shipments. He has been with Show-Ease since September 1977.

Hereford Sale April 28 With New York Bull Test

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The Northeast Production Select X Sale presents the opportunity to obtain some of the best Hereford genetics available in the Northeast.

Consignors from New York have put together an offering to be made available Sat, Apr. 28, immediately following the bull test sale.

These cattle have all been selected and evaluated by the sale committee, and represent the finest possible offering. There are several top show prospects in this sale.

Bobcat Contest To Mark 500,000th Skid-Steer Loader

WEST FARGO, N.D. — Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll-Rand Company and the leading designer and manufacturer of compact equipment, has announced the start of the "Bobcat 500k Contest" to celebrate production of its 500,000th Bobcat® skid-steer loader.

Compact equipment users who share stories about their toughest jobs — jobs that tested both operator and loader entrance — will have a chance to win one of 500 prizes.

The grand prize winner will receive a 500K Limited Edition Bobcat 773 loader. Seven second prize winners will receive a $2,500 Bobcat attachment certificate, and 15 third prize winners will receive a $500 Bobcat attachment certificate. Additional prizes include radio controlled Bobcat models and Bobcat die-cast model collectibles.

Grand prize and attachment certificate winners will be determined mid-November 2001 and announced by early December.

Entrants can obtain submission information and complete contest rules online at www.bobcat.com, through their local dealers, at select industry trade shows and in the Bobcat Work-Saver Magazine.

The "Bobcat 500k Contest" grand prize — the Limited Edition Bobcat 773 Loader — will feature a Limited Edition decal package, gold wheel rims and a gold tailgate. The machine also is equipped with a deluxe operator package that includes 13-inch super flotation tires, deluxe enclosed cab with heat and air conditioning, deluxe instrumentation with keyless start security system, hydraulic Power Bob-Tach and a turbo-charged diesel engine.

"The 'Bobcat 500k Contest' celebrates more than 40 years of making the toughest, most well-known compact equipment in the world," said Chuck Hoge, president and CEO of Bobcat Company. "Since 1958, Bobcat equipment has helped to change the way the world works. We're excited at the growth and acceptance of the skid-steer loader, and we're proud to have played a leading role in the development of the compact equipment industry overall."

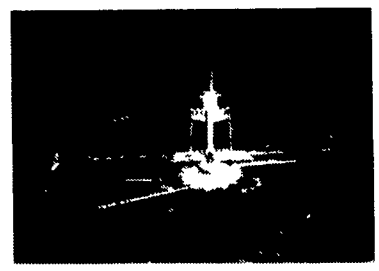
Ensure Clean Raking, Light, Airy Swaths

COLUMBUS, Ind. — The new, Liner 470T AND 350T single rotor pull-type rakes from Claas of America deliver a clean harvest, full output and light, airy, left laying swaths. The Liner 350T has a working width of 11-feet 4-inches. The Liner 470T rake has a 15-foot working width.

Ideal for use in a variety of farm operations, both new Liner rakes feature heavy duty drives, Claas contour running gear, and a high capacity rotary raking system.

The 350T and 470T utilize a hermetically sealed rotor gearbox to power the rotary tine clearing system. Inside the gearbox the steel tine arm rollers are permanently lubricated and each tine arm is mounted on two bearings to ensure extended service life and dependability.



The new, Claas Liner 470T and 350T single rotor pull-type rakes from Claas of America deliver a clean harvest, full output and light, airy, left laying swaths.

The Claas contour system, which is walking tandem axles, is standard on both models of Liner rakes. The contour system provides smooth raking even in the toughest terrain.

The dual hydraulic system on the rakes only requires a single tractor remote outlet. Because of the two-cylinder system, the rake raises level to the transport position, providing excellent tine-to-ground clearance.

Eleven tine arms with three double tines per tine arm are utilized on the Liner 350T and the Liner 470T has 13 tine arms with four double tines per arm.

Sussex Irrigation Honored For Customer Service

LINDSAY, Neb. — Lindsay Manufacturing Company recently honored Sussex Irrigation Company, Inc., Laurel, Del., with its Distinguished Performance Award at the company's annual convention in San Antonio, Texas.

This honor is given to Zimmatic irrigation dealerships that provide growers with top-notch customer service and have implemented high-performing marketing programs.

"During 2000, Sussex Irrigation Company, Inc. was very successful at helping growers save time, labor and money through Zimmatic's industry-leading line of automated irrigation equipment and products," said Bob Snoozy, vice president of sales. "Their partnership approach to customer service was a big reason for their success."

Zimmatic dealers are a critical link in the chain between customers and Lindsay Manufacturing. Lindsay provides several product education and training seminars to the dealers who in turn pass the information on to their customers. Many dealers also provide customers with a hands-on training opportunity by hosting the Zimmatic Technical Training Center as part of a one-day irrigation equipment seminar.

Gehl Company Introduces New Skid Loader

WEST BEND, Wis. — The Gehl Company has introduced the new Gehl Model 7800 as its "biggest, strongest and fastest skid loader" available today. Powered by a 110-hp turbo diesel, this unit has a 3,600 pound SAE operating load rating with a lift height of 11-foot 10-inches.

"This new skid loader was designed from the ground up to be the ultimate in terms of digging and lifting performance," said Kelly Moore, Gehl skid loader product development manager. "It features vertical-lift linkage, which provides consistent forward reach throughout the entire lift cycle."

With 3,300 psi system relief pressure and 40 gpm high-flow auxiliary hydraulics, this unit delivers unmatched breakout force and greater hydraulic attachment performance.

According to Moore, "A two-speed drive is standard, allowing travel speeds up to 14 mph. And there's a new ride-control option that provides floating load arm action for a smoother ride."

The large cab provides more head, shoulder and leg room. A highback suspension seat adjusts for greater comfort and less fatigue. Servo-controlled, low-effort levers deliver precise response for added productivity. And full 360-degree visibility adds to operator confidence.

"Like all Gehl skid loaders, this unit allows easy access for routine service," states Moore. "The engine cover has a gas-spring assist for easy lifting. The cab structure, which pivots up and out of the way, is easily raised with a built-in hydraulic pump."

In addition to the Model 7800, Gehl also introduced the Model 7600. It shares most of the 7800's great features but with a 90-hp diesel and 3,150 pound rated operating load.

Study Shows Growers Are Happy With Extreme

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — The results are in. A satisfaction study shows that users of Extreme™ herbicide are pleased.

In its first year on the market, growers applied Extreme to more than one million acres of Roundup Ready® soybeans and plan to increase acreage treated with Extreme this year.

Three-fourths of all soybean acreage in 2000 was planted to Roundup Ready soybeans. Of the 400 users of Extreme who were interviewed, approximately 85 percent were satisfied and plan to use Extreme this season.

Extreme herbicide was developed after an extensive research tour of corn and soybean country. More than 85 percent of the surveyed growers were interested in a product combining glyphosate, the active ingredient in Roundup® herbicide, with residual.

"Growers wanted the residual control of Pursuit® herbicide for their Roundup Ready soybeans. We are very happy to see they found Extreme™ herbicide to be a beneficial product," said Scott Kay, market manager for Extreme.

After its first season, Extreme has the distinction of being the leader of value-added herbicides — glyphosate premixes specially created for residual weed control in Roundup Ready soybeans.

Extreme combines glyphosate, the active ingredient in the number-one contact herbicide, Roundup, with the proven residual herbicide, Pursuit, in one jug. These two products have been used and trusted by growers for years. Combined, they create a superior alternative to Roundup Ultra® herbicide alone. The proven residual power of Pursuit provides season-long control of grasses and broadleaf weeds such as nightshade, foxtail, velvetleaf, and ragweed.

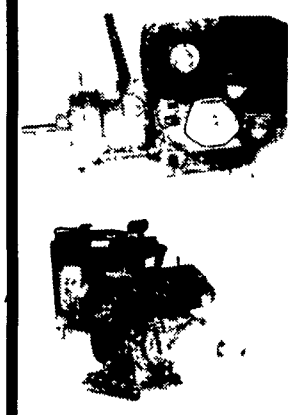
BE Power Train Clutch and Gear Reduction

Model F



Features

- New style clutch. Fewer moving parts than ever before. Parts hardened & finish ground. No linkage to wear out.
- Bolts directly onto most 8-22 hp engines. Can be used on engines up to 30 Hp.
- 5.8-1 ratio for P.T.O. hookups, engine RPMs 3130, and 540 at PTO.
- Run live hydraulic with belt.
- No need to cut off crankshaft, just bolt it on.

Take a closer look. Designed for the farmer and/or whoever needs a clutch and gear reduction for P.T.O. and other drives. This BE Clutch and Reduction can easily be mounted directly on engines such as Honda, Kawasaki, Robin w/special pilot dia., Briggs-Vanguard and others. Some engines with larger pilot diameters need an adaptor (we make them), such as Kohler, Onan, small diesels and others.

Case IH FAST CUT
High Speed Case IH 8309 Disc Mower Conditioner, 9' Cut

Also Super Deal on 12 Foot Center Pivot Model 8312

The Case International 8309 disc mower conditioner is a fast cutter. High speed, heat-treated discs spin at over 180 miles per hour to cut a swath of more than nine feet where a sicklebar machine might plug up

Wet and/or dense hay, tangled grasses or weeds, ant hills and rodent mounds don't faze the 8309 You keep on going for top productivity

Wide, intermeshing rolls gently, yet effectively condition the crop and lay down a wide swath or windrow sized for your harvest equipment In-field adjustments are quick and easy, too.

When you need the fast cut of a disc machine, see the Case International 8309.

Cut faster... condition better

For greater maneuverability and higher efficiency, nothing beats the Model 1431 Discbine® disc mower-conditioner from New Holland. It features a 13' cutting width, and operates at high ground speeds in wet, heavy grass without plugging. Fire anthills and gopher mounds won't stop the new Model 1431 either. Outstanding features include:

- A center pivot-tongue design
- Independent modular cutterbar with ten small-diameter cutting discs
- 102" wide conditioning rolls
- A full range of vertical and lateral flotation
- A torsion-bar, roll-pressure system
- A cutterbar driven from both ends

NEW HOLLAND

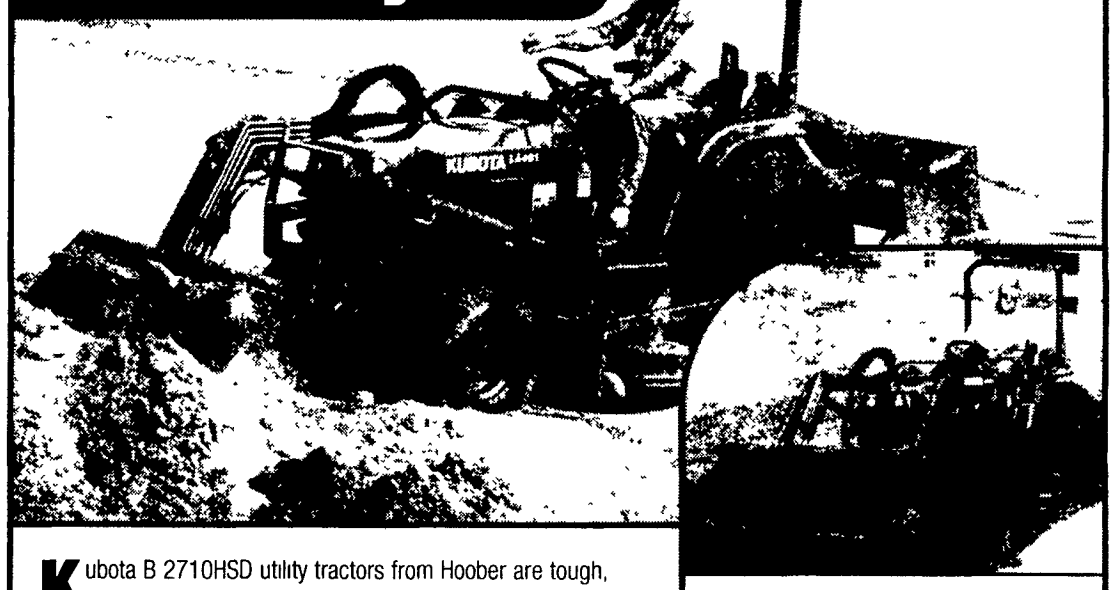
Tough Enough To Take On Any Task



Kubota B 2710HSD utility tractors from Hoober are tough, versatile and maneuverable, which makes them ideal for a variety of applications The B 2710HSD further enhances your productivity by allowing you to use the front loader and mid-mount mower at the same time That makes the tractor perfect for small farm chores, landscaping, nursery, and light construction

The superb maneuverability comes from the hydrostatic transmission and 4WD system A single pedal controls both speed and direction, and that allows you to change quickly without shifting or clutching This feature is especially helpful when working in tight spaces

Along with every Kubota tractor, comes Hoober's experienced tractor service technicians and parts support personnel to keep your Kubota running strong all year long

In stock and ready for delivery!

Can Your Disc Cut It?

Take a look at the features that make the new Krause 7400 the best disc on the market today.

1 Transport Width

With a road width of only 10' 11", the 18' and 21' Krause 7400 Discs make transportation easy.

2 Double Offset Designed Frame

The 7400's strength starts with a rugged 5' x 7' mainframe that comes complete with a three-year warranty. The double offset gang design provides a level-field finish, the "trademark" of a Krause disc.

3 Rockflex Bearing Arms

New, heavier Rockflex bearing arms feature a full 1¼" thick by 2½" wide standard to flex over the toughest obstacles. These bearing arms are heat treated for durability.

4 Heavy-Duty Walking Tandem

Krause's heavy-duty walking tandem system smooths out rough fields, and rough roads when transporting. This feature gives you more precise depth control and more stable discing.

5 Wing Fold Hinges

Massive 1½" x 15' hinge bolts on the Krause 7400 distribute folding forces over a wide area, not concentrating them in a narrow hinge like some competitive designs.

6 Forward Action Wing Wheels

The forward action wing wheels rotate close to the front gangs for precise depth control on the Krause 7400. This design limits the need for optional front gauge wheels that are necessary on other brands.

7 Heavy Cast Spools

The heavy cast spools multiply the strength of the Krause disc gang, making it the strongest in the industry. The design supports the disc blade more positively without creating a "stress line" like competitive designs.

Where Does the Competition Stack Up???

All New & Used Products Backed By Hoober Parts & Service

"Hoober is a good organization and they really aim to please the farmer They have good men in the parts department and they get me the parts I need fast A lot of times I can call and they can diagnose the problem right over the phone. They always do what they can to keep me going - their service is excellent "

Dave Smith, Church Hill, MD

"Hoober is a top-notch organization Their service is outstanding and that's because of their people I know when I'm broke down they'll do their best to get me going They really work to help you "

Glen Engle, Silver Maple Farms, Cochranville, PA

Charlie Hoober helped me one time when I was broke down with my IH 1480 Combine the evening before Thanksgiving. I thought I would be down at least over the weekend because I wasn't very familiar with Hoober service. But I found out in a hurry that they were there to help me They got a used rotor out of one of their machines at the Intercourse store and needed a cone to come up from the Delaware store Charlie was in Delaware having Thanksgiving with his son, and Friday morning he got up at 2:30 in the morning to bring a cone up. The mechanics left Intercourse at 5am, and they had me rolling by about 9:30 Friday morning. I was impressed that the owner of the whole business took time to help me out - that really made a believer out of me

JOHN DEERE
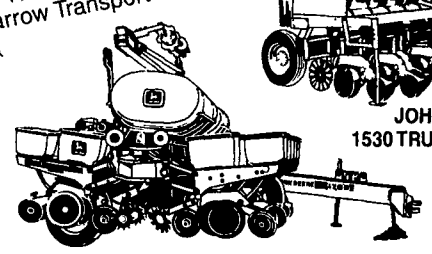
1530 TRU-VEE™ DRILL



JOHN DEERE
1760 MAX EMERGE® PLUS PLANTER

WHAT'S BETTER THAN A SPLIT-ROW PLANTER?

Faster and more economical, a corn planter and a soybean drill could be right for you. Here's why:

➤ Two machines can boost productivity 96 percent! It takes a Knize 12/23-row planter nearly 127 hours to plant a 2,000-acre farm (half corn, half beans) With both a 12-row John Deere 1760 and 15-foot 1530 in the field, you could plant 2,333 acres of corn and 1,592 acres of soybeans in those 127 hours

➤ See us for all the details

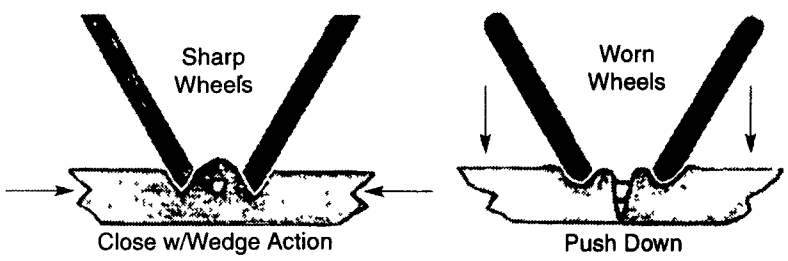
Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry,hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)



Will your fields get the finishing touch?

Benefits include:
- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

Ohio State Receives Grant To Develop Beef Value-Based Marketing System

WOOSTER, Ohio — A program aimed at improving Ohio's beef cattle industry may make it possible for farmers to reap the rewards for producing beef that meets specific individual quality characteristics and market demands.

The Ohio State University Ohio Beef Industry Center, along with OSU Extension and the Ohio Department of Agriculture, received $60,000 U.S. Department of Agriculture grant to develop a value-based marketing "grid" system that pays farmers for the actual carcass value of the animals they produce. The system is part of the Federal-State Marketing Improvement Program (FSMIP) aimed at developing value-added products small Ohio producers and processors can take advantage of.

"Ohio processors are smaller than major meat processors and can't take advantage of large-scale processing and case-ready product development because of volume," said Fluharty. "We are trying to work with producers and processors to take advantage of their existing strengths."

The "grid" system is one way farmers can improve beef value by producing cattle that meet processor specifications and be rewarded for providing beef that fit marketing demands. The system, involving pricing cattle on an individual basis, refers to economic rewards or discounts that would be applied to the base price of the beef produced that correspond to a variety of characteristics. For example, cattle with desirable quality grades — tenderness, yield grade and ribeye size — would receive a premium above the normal base price, while those carcasses that lack the desired quality would be discounted.

The current USDA grading system rates beef quality based on marbling and carcass maturity to differentiate between beef products of older, grass-fed cattle and younger, grain-fed animals. These factors are used to determine all USDA beef quality grades, such as Prime, Choice and Select.

Changes in production practices and technological and genetic advances are outdating the current system and ushering in the need to rate cattle on an individual basis rather than as a group. By developing alliances, identifying individual cattle and tracking their genetics, health and management guidelines for production can be created that assure a more consistent product for consumers. Such a system enables to be tracked from the farmer to the processor, thereby providing information that can be used to improve the marketability of the product.

Fluharty said part of the grant money will be used to conduct consumer surveys to determine what unique beef products consumers would like to see and whether they are economically feasible to develop.

He added that the "grid" system should be developed within a year.

UD Extension Launches Sweeping Nutrient Education

NEWARK, Del. — In a typical year, late winter may be a slower time for farmers and others working the land — but not this year.

By the end of March, more than 1,000 Delawareans will have completed the first round of the state's nutrient management classes, and another 500 to 600 people will have completed the second.

These classes are the result of the Delaware Nutrient Management Act. Signed into law in June 1999 to better protect Delaware's watersheds and water quality, the DNM Act established strict regulations on any enterprise that uses plant nutrients or disposes of livestock wastes, including agricultural operations, horticultural concerns, golf courses, and lawn care companies.

According to Dr. Dave Hansen and Dr. Greg Binford, assistant professors of soil and water quality at the University of Delaware (UD) College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, the ultimate goal of nutrient management education is to ensure that these enterprises match nutrient inputs to plant needs.

"Among other things, the new regulations set into motion a certification program to ensure the use of best management practices (BMP) in the generation, handling and land application of nutrients in Delaware," Hansen said.

Hansen and Binford, who are also UD cooperative extension specialists in nutrient management, say that certification requires six to 12 credits of educational coursework, depending upon the nature of the operation. As the architects for this statewide education effort, the two have spent the past two years preparing for the new regulations and the public outreach it would require. Bud Malone, extension specialist for poultry, and Gordon Johnson, Kent County extension agent for agriculture, assist Hansen and Binford in teaching.

These nutrient management classes mark the second time in three years that UD extension has undertaken such an enormous effort. The first, the Pesticide Certification Program, under the direction of Dr. Susan P. Whitney, extension specialist for pesticides, involved pesticide application and educating people on how to reduce exposure and increase safety when applying pesticides.

According to Hansen, Delaware's approach to this outreach education is not typical in that it brings through the program not only those people who are required by law to establish nutrient management plans, but also those who are affected by the plan.

"Maryland, for example, shares the same nutrient management problems as Delaware and also has a law requiring a management plan for operations over a certain size," he noted. "Maryland's education effort is targeted toward certifying only those individuals who are required to make nutrient plans. Delaware's effort encompasses a broader audience, a first, in the First State."

Hansen is surprised by the turnout thus far, adding that people "may not appreciate the new regulations, but they do appreciate the classes."

"It's amazing to have so many people come to class because they don't have to yet. The deadline for certification is Jan. 1, 2004," he said.

Mandatory nutrient planning begins in 2003, Hansen said. About 20 percent of growers will be required to write management plans each year until the plans are completed in 2007.

"We initially estimated that about 4,000 people would go through the certification program," Binford said. "Now it appears we could have more than 5,000 people certified over the next few years."

Binford and Hansen agree that while these regulations require nutrient management planning, this is not a new concept for many growers, who have been "managing their nutrients for years."

"Record keeping will prove useful to growers in the future," Binford said. "Growers in other states who have kept detailed records for years say that these accounts are an 'insurance policy' in case details of their operation are questioned."

For questions about the nutrient management plan in Delaware, contact Hansen at djhansen@udel.edu or (302) 856-7303; or Greg Binford at binfordg@udel.edu, or (302) 831-2146. Nutrient management classes, discontinued for the growing season, will resume in the fall.

Take The Long View With Nutrient Removal

NORCROSS, Ga. — Yields are increasing...and have been for decades. This is the wonder of modern agriculture.

As our population increases, production efficiency through innovation and new technology has kept pace to provide us with a continuing supply of abundant and nutritious food. Fertilizer products and practices are important contributors to this success.

High yields come at a cost. Essential elements such as phosphorus and potassium are absorbed from the soil by plant roots and exported in the harvested crop; the higher the yield, the greater the removal. Yields of many crops grown today have doubled in just the past few decades. Such high nutrient demand requires skillful management to avoid yield limitations developing because of an induced nutrient deficiency.

Nutrient uptake and nutrient removal are not the same. Nutrient uptake refers to all the nutrients taken up by the crop as it grows and matures. This would include the nutrients in both the vegetative and reproductive (seed or grain) portions of the crop, including the roots. Nutrient removal, on the other hand, refers only to that portion of the crop actually hauled from the field. In some cases uptake and removal are similar. For example, harvesting hay or silage removes almost all of the aboveground portion of the crop, so removal would approach that of total uptake. However, uptake and removal are quite different when only the seed or fruit is removed and the vegetative portions (that is, leaves, stems and stalks) are plowed down or remain on the field surface.

Phosphorus plays a vital role in genetic transfer and is part of the DNA molecule. It is not surprising, therefore, to find it concentrated in the seed. Although overall plant content of phosphorus is generally lower than that of potassium, harvests of grain from such crops as corn, wheat and rice remove substantially more phosphorus than potassium. Actual removal will vary somewhat depending on the individual variety, and environmental and management factors, but the following illustrates the point.

Each 100 pounds of corn removes an estimated equivalent of 0.79 pounds of P_2O_5 compared to only 0.52 pounds of K_2O, or 52 percent more P_2O_5 compared to K_2O. So growers producing grain and returning the vegetative material to the soil are removing a lot more phosphorus than potassium with each harvest even though it takes substantially more potassium than phosphorus to actually grow the crop.

Important functions of potassium in the plant include a role in the synthesis of carbohydrates and protein. Therefore, harvests that remove a lot of protein, such as hay, silage and forage, remove a lot of potassium. Alfalfa, for example, removes the equivalent of about 15 pounds of P_2O_5 per ton and 60 pounds of K_2O, or four times more potassium relative to phosphorus. The same is true for carbohydrate. Such crops as potatoes, sugar beets, grapes, tomatoes and fruit also remove a lot of potassium. One final example...potato tubers remove the equivalent of about 0.15 pounds of P_2O_5 per hundred-weight and 0.56 pounds of K_2O, nearly four times more potassium than phosphorus.

Our challenge for the future is not just to produce high yields, but progressively higher yields. Understanding what such yields remove from the soil helps us manage fields for the long term. High yields can deplete soils of their fertility, but only if we allow it to happen. Understanding nutrient removal helps us take the long view in precision fertilizer management for today and tomorrow.

New BMP Guidelines For Professional Heifer Growers

SAVOY, Ill. — The national Professional Dairy Heifer Growers Association (PDHGA) has introduced "Best Management Practices" (BMP) guidelines. Developed through an alliance with the Milk and Dairy Quality Assurance (DQA) Program, these new management guidelines are documented to help facilitate the development and implementation of improved practices to standardize the heifer growing industry sector.

First introduced at the recent PDHGA Annual Conference in Seattle, Washington, the BMP guidelines are presented in the form of a user-friendly, eight-page booklet that heifer growers and their advisers can be used to perform a self-audit of the operation. The consultation guide is designed to help the grower ask the right questions of themselves and the growers' herd health veterinarian, nutritionist, or other dairy consultants. In some cases, heifer growers may want to work through the Quality Control Points on their own, or they may go through them with their staff.

"Since the inception of the PDHGA, heifer quality standards and the management practices that achieve them have been driving the organization," noted Don Gardner, D.V.M. and current president of PDHGA. "There are two common questions that always get asked," continued Gardner. 'Heifer growers often ask: 'What do I need to do or know to get started or improve my custom dairy heifer raising business?' Dairy producers ask: 'What should I look for in a quality custom heifer raiser for my calves?' After a year of intensive work by a PDHGA committee representing growers, industry, and academia, these guidelines are now available," added Gardner.

At the introduction, the BMP Quality Control Points cover business procedures, labor management, prepartum cow care, and care from birth to weaning. Care from weaning to pre-breeding, breeding management, breeding to calving, and then a preview of a second phase of voluntary audits called the Five Star Dairy Quality Assurance Recognition make up the remaining areas of review. This area also covers pathogen management, biosecurity, and environmental stewardship.

"These guidelines are a work in progress and will no doubt undergo periodic revision as recommendations and industry needs change." said Gardner.

Additional information on "Best Management Practices" for heifer growers can be obtained by contacting PHDGA's office toll-free at 1-877-434-3377 or by visiting the association Website at www.pdhga.org.

Pre-Owned Tractor Program Initiated By Case

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH announces "Selected by Case IH" — a new program that provides peace-of-mind for buyers of pre-owned Case IH agricultural equipment. Each Selected by Case IH tractor comes with a non-deductible power train warranty of 12 months or 1,000 hours, whichever comes first. The warranty covers the engine, transmission, axles and final drives.

"With Selected by Case IH, buyers can be sure that the tractor is reconditioned not only to look 'as new' but to perform 'as new,'" said Randy Wood, Case IH product marketing manager for row-crop tractors and commercial re-marketing. "Selected by Case IH buyers will realize significant cost savings over purchasing a new tractor and will have the security of a company-backed warranty."

To earn the Selected by Case IH mark, pre-owned equipment must pass rigid and demanding standards, Wood said.

To be eligible for reconditioning, tractors must be clean, well maintained and have low hours. Once basic eligibility is established, tractors are measured against a detailed checklist to assure performance and reliability. Tractors that meet the checklist requirements or undergo factory upgrades to be brought up to current standards will be distinguished with the Selected by Case IH badge.

"The first step is to drain all the driveline, hydraulic and cooling system fluids and send samples to an independent testing lab for analysis," Wood said. "The results of those comprehensive tests help determine which tractors will make our cut."

Any parts or components that do not meet factory specifications are replaced. Upgrades are completed to bring the tractor up to current standards.

Buyers receive copies of the tractor's reconditioning checklist, as well as copies of an independent lab's fluids analysis, plus an owner's manual.

Initially, the Selected by Case IH program will be available only on 8900 Series Magnum tractors. The first reconditioned tractors will be available in dealerships in 2001. In the future, look for additional tractor models, combines and implements with the Selected badge.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit Offers Scholarships

WESTMINSTER, Md. — MidAtlantic Farm Credit, the largest Farm Credit Association on the East Coast, announces the availability of two $2,500 scholarships to students who plan to attend or are continuing their education at a two- or four-year college.

The scholarships are available to any member of MidAtlantic Farm Credit, as well as their children. MidAtlantic has over 9,000 members in Delaware, Maryland, southeastern Pennsylvania and the eastern shore of Virginia.

Applications must be received by April 30 to be considered for the 2001 scholarship program. Winners will be announced by May 18.

"As a member-owned cooperative, we take a strong interest in the future success of our members," said Bob Frazee, president and CEO of MidAtlantic. "We feel it is important to help promote the education of our membership — current and future — and our scholarship program is one way in which we're doing that. Of course, programs like this that advance our membership towards their goals, are just one more benefit of belonging to a cooperative."

Scholarship applications are available at any of MidAtlantic's 18 offices, or by calling Donna Dawson, at (800) 477-9947.

Leaders Discuss Farm Policy At Convention

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — In a roundtable discussion at the National Farmers Union (NFU) 99th anniversary convention, farm leaders discussed and debated what direction America's farm policy should take.

"When you discuss challenges in agriculture, two major areas must be addressed: the Freedom to Farm Bill and inadequacies of the current trade agreements," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU. "If we fail to deal with the issues of farm policy, we will be swallowed by the conglomerate agriculture producers."

The panel expressed many views about the current price and policy crises facing American agriculture. Their concerns and recommendations included supporting a supply management program, reworking farm loan programs, the establishment of a farmer-owned reserve for commodities, fair trade regulations, and a safety net on specialty crops.

Several panel members expressed their concern over increasing consolidation in the food and agriculture industries. Both panel members and delegates participating in the forum reiterated the need for a Farm Bill that works for family farmers and ranchers.

"We have a lot of work to do on farm and rural policy," said Swenson. "Whether we talk about the need for a strong renewable fuels program or improved trade agreements, farmers must be vocal and work to guide policy decisions and farming practices in American agriculture."

Participants on the roundtable included Bruce Knight, National Corn Growers Association; Larry Mitchell, American Corn Growers Association; Paul Olson, National Farmers Organization; Dalton Yancy, Florida Sugar Can League; Ray Van Driessche, American Sugar Beet Growers Association; Tom Camerlo, National Milk Producers Association; Terry Detrick, National Association of Wheat Growers; Dan Hunter, Southwest Peanut Growers' Association; and Hampton Henton, Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association. Mike Hergert, president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters, served as moderator for the panel discussion.

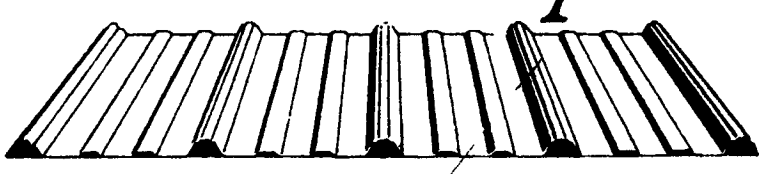
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds
- Can be used for dust control purposes
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products

An Essential Guide

The 2001 Reference Guide To Animal Health And Housing, published by Lancaster Farming, is an up-to-date, useful resource for producers covering dairy and many different types of livestock and poultry.

Lancaster Farming staff writers strive hard to ensure accurate reports of the latest technological developments from a variety of experts, presented here for your consideration.

Lancaster Farming is indebted to the extension services of colleges and universities in the eight-state coverage area in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic for their help and guidance.

As a supplement to the April 7, 2001 issue of Lancaster Farming, this guide will be available at shows at which Lancaster Farming will have exhibits. They include Ag Progress Days, Empire Farm Days, Pennsylvania Farm Show, and others.

We strive to update this information regularly. For any changes or corrections, contact us at (717) 626-1164 or e-mail at farming@lancasterfarming.com.

Cover Photos

In an attempt to represent the variety found in agriculture, the cover photos illustrate several facets of the business.

At top left, holding turkey poults are Keith, 2, and Kevin, 3, sons of Kelly and Heidi Eckert, Mount Zion, Lebanon County. The Angus cattle find their home at Weaverland Valley Farms, home of Larry and Barb Weaver, Ephrata.

At Alvin Stoltzfus' Spring Water Farm, Gap, brood sows in the family's pasture operation recline in huts. Oscar and Marie Sipler, Lititz, own the curious Brown Swiss in the bottom right photograph. The white Saanens competed at the Allentown fair this past season.

Video Provides History Of A.I. Identification, Control

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Dr. David Kradel, PennAg Poultry Council, and others spoke about the history of avian influenza (A.I.) and efforts to stem the disease at a Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant in March.

About three dozen poultry producers and agri-industry representatives watched a 25-minute videotape, "Avian Influenza: Preventing the Spread of Disease," at the seminar.

The video is available from Penn State Extension Service.

It's all in an effort to rid flocks of the deadly yet persistent avian influenza (A.I.) virus that devastated the industry in 1983 and posed another significant threat just a few years ago.

The USDA planned to compensate live bird market (LBM) operators $1.5 million to break the infectious cycle that has been found to originate in the live bird markets. Their method: stage a "chicken holiday" in the fall of 2001, when, for a few days, no birds would be sold at the market. They include New York City, New Jersey, and Philadelphia LBMs.

In recent memory, according to David Kradel of the PennAg Poultry Council, every time the LBMs were tested, 40 percent came back positive for A.I virus.

Kradel wrote the video, made from a $20,000 USDA Special Needs grant obtained by Penn State in 1998.

With eight billion broilers and 70 billion eggs manufactured each year, according to the video's narrator, A.I. is especially dangerous because, under certain conditions, the A.I. viruses can "change and cause very devastating diseases."

In 1983-1984, a highly pathogenic type of virus was so catastrophic it literally wiped out thousands of birds. To stop the disease, 17 million chickens were killed at a cost of $62 million.

These days, an outbreak of that magnitude could cost between $250 million to $300 million, noted Kradel.

The "chicken holiday," with complete closure of the markets, will pay in terms of breaking the cycle of disease infection. Live bird markets have long been known to be carriers of and transmitters of the A.I. virus.

Different levels of pathology, from nonpathogenic to highly pathogenic, have been observed in different A.I. virus strains. The real worry: could the virus mutate and become deadly, going from nonpathogenic to highly pathogenic, in a short period of time?

Virus on animal manure can be deadly: feces the size of a dime can infect a million birds, according to the video.

The video points out that any A.I. virus could bring the perception in the minds that it could be a danger to human health. There has been a concern that the virus could, through mutation, be transmitted to humans and be a human health threat.

Lowering that risk could go a long way toward preventing

NPPC Works To Protect U.S. Swine Herds From Foreign Animal Diseases

SWALEDALE, Iowa — The recent outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) in the United Kingdom (U.K.) and now continental Europe has heightened awareness of potential animal health risks facing pork producers.

Although the U.S. has not had to face FMD since 1929, the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) has been working diligently for many years to ensure that all preventive measures are taken and that, in the event of an incursion of a foreign animal disease, an effective and rapid response would be mounted.

"Even though we have been fortunate in the U.S. and have not had to deal with a severe animal disease outbreak like the U.K. is experiencing, it doesn't mean that we can become complacent," said Jon Caspers, a producer from Swaledale, Iowa, and Swine Health Committee Chair for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "There are certain steps the industry needs to take to protect the U.S. swine herd from a similar outbreak."

NPPC efforts to build a strong safety net around the U.S. are focused in several key areas, including national coordination of prevention and response capabilities, foreign animal disease research programs, research and diagnostic facilities, and producer and veterinarian education.

National Coordination

At the national level, NPPC, as a founding member of the National Animal Health Emergency Management Steering Committee, has worked with other commodity groups, state and federal animal health officials, and veterinarians to ensure implementation of critical prevention and response capabilities.

The steering committee, through quarterly meetings and "immeasurable economic harm" or threat to poultry and public health, according to the video.

The virus can also threaten farms that keep swine and poultry. A strain of virus, H1N1, is present in swine herds and can mutate to poultry as H1N2. There's also a concern that H1N2 can cross over to turkeys, Kradel noted. Forty percent of swine tested for pseudorabies have tested position for the swine A.I. serotype.

Kradel noted that USDA should put a priority on developing a recombinant vaccine that could be easily administered to flocks. The cost is estimated to be about $6 million.

monthly conference calls, has developed a new partnership model for emergency management coordination, assessed state and industry capabilities and plans, developed standards for state emergency management, and provided educational materials to producers and veterinarians.

In addition, Dr. Beth Lautner, NPPC vice president, science and technology, has served as the vice chair of the Secretary of Agriculture's Advisory Committee on Foreign Animal and Poultry Diseases. This committee reviews current USDA programs with regard to foreign animal diseases and makes recommendations for improvements.

Three pork producer representatives are also currently participating in the Animal Health Safeguarding Review. This review is a comprehensive study of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service's (APHIS) activities, procedures, policies, partnerships, and authorities that comprise the existing animal health safeguarding system.

Pork producers have been participating in foreign animal disease test exercises for classical swine fever and FMD at the state and national level. The most recent FMD exercise in November 2000 tested the response capabilities of the U.S., Canada, and Mexico. During the exercise, the NPPC Swine Health Committee offered input and producer views on various control and eradication strategies and on how best to communicate with producers during an outbreak.

NPPC stays in close contact with USDA officials with regard to import policies and disease outbreaks in other countries, and provides comments and technical expertise as needed. The council supports the availability of additional funds to provide increased passenger inspections from high risk ports of entry, enhanced training, increased disease surveillance, technical assistance to countries experiencing outbreak,s and development of a high-tech emergency management operations center.

NPPC is one of the key supporters of the Animal Health Protection Act, which was introduced in the 106th Congress and will be reintroduced soon. The Act provides additional measures to protect U.S. animal herds and enhance response capabilities in the event of a foreign animal disease.

Research And Facilities

NPPC has provided funding with checkoff dollars for research projects on foot-and-mouth disease at the USDA Agricultural Research Service's Plum Island Animal Disease Center. This research has focused on development of vaccines and improved diagnostic tools. In addition, NPPC recently participated in a review of the foreign animal disease research programs at Plum Island.

NPPC has been working with the Animal Agriculture Coalition to secure funding to properly maintain the Plum Island Animal Disease Center and Foreign Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory and to provide appropriate new facilities for the National Veterinary Services Laboratories, National Animal Disease Center, and the Center for Veterinary Biologics.

These facilities are critical to provide the research and diagnostic support needed to detect and respond to a foreign animal disease.

Education

With checkoff funds, a variety of resources have been developed to help producers keep their herds safe. A recently released Foreign Animal Disease Awareness video looks at the potential threats of foreign animal diseases and provides information on what is being done by government and industry officials to diminish these threats. It also highlights biosecurity breeches on farms that could allow a foreign animal disease to enter a herd.

Other resources describe biosecurity measures that should be taken by all producers to stop the spread of disease on their operation. Brochures, pamphlets, and other publications are available describing practical ways all producers can contribute to protect the U.S. pork industry against a damaging outbreak.

All checkoff funded information on biosecurity and foreign animal diseases can be found on the Internet on www.porkscience.org. This newly launched Website includes up-to-date scientific, research-based information for the pork industry. The Hot Topics link provides access to a variety of basic information on FMD and the outbreak in Europe.

Producer Caution Critical

According to USDA, FMD is not considered a human health . isk but humans can carry the virus on their clothing, shoes, body (particularly the throat and nasal passages), and personal items. The disease is extremely contagious and spreads easily among cloven-hoofed animals such as cattle, sheep, pigs, goats, and deer.

Lautner urges producers to help prevent the spread of FMD. "Observe the biosecurity measures recommended by USDA, which are posted on the NPPC Website, if traveling to countries with FMD or hosting visitors from FMD-infected areas," she said. "Contact with U.S. livestock or wildlife should be strictly avoided for five days after visiting areas with FMD. Traveling clothes should be cleaned properly. Wear other clothing for contact with livestock."

During this outbreak, the NPPC Swine Health Committee and pork producer representatives are in regular contact with APHIS regarding protective measures in place to protect U.S. herds and information needed by producers.

Producers are urged to continue to report any unusual or suspicious signs of disease to their veterinarian or state or federal animal health official.

Dairy Reproduction Troubleshooting Focus Of Extension Meeting

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

HONEY BROOK (Chester Co.) To address the specific topic of dairy reproduction, extension services in southeastern Pennsylvania organized several meetings to educate producers.

Two meetings in Berks County, one in Chester County, and one in the Montgomery/Bucks area gave dairy farmers critical information on important facets of their business.

Nutrition's Impact On Reproduction

Dr. Michael O'Connor, reproduction specialist and professor of dairy science at Penn State, spread the word about new breeding management techniques and encouraged producers to have a carefully-planned, instead of random, approach to reproduction.

O'Connor also attempted to show "how effective and labor-saving these systems can be," he said. Reproduction management is not just injecting a cow but putting a system into place and working with the cow, he said.

O'Connor began his presentation by teaching about nutrition and its effect on reproduction. O'Connor also covered several methods of reproduction used on dairy farms.

Nutrition concerns for optimal reproduction was first on the speaker's agenda. "Energy intake and energy balance are the most important factors in reproduction," he said.

Since energy levels are so integral to successful breeding, how does a producer see what the herd's status is on the amount of energy?

Evaluate body condition, said O'Connor. "A cow should not exceed one body condition score loss between the time she calves and the time you want to breed her for the first time."

A minor loss would .5 or lower during the first five weeks of lactation. Consequently, keeping a cow in good condition and cycling properly as soon as feasible has direct impact on breeding efficiency.

Researchers in a Michigan study found that health problems were less associated with conception failure than a change in body conditioning score. Cows ate less, produced less milk, and took more energy reserves to produce milk than cows with earlier ovulations.

The cycle perpetuates itself as cows with lower energy reserves use the energy off their body flesh, further inhibiting ovulation. Adequate feed bunk space, frequent feeding, and a clean feed bunk will encourage dry matter intake.

The other side of the coin, overconditioning, may also be detrimental to reproduction. Heifers just coming fresh are often overconditioned, said O'Connor. Typicaly, an overconditioned animal has poor uterus muscle tone, leading to difficult births or a retained placenta. Consequently the cow is more susceptible to uterine infection. Overconditioned dry cows are also two-and-a-half times more likely to develop cystic ovaries.

Ammonia

Low ammonia levels are also important to reproductive health. High levels of ammonia, said O'Connor, produce a transformation to urea. High urea levels may alter the composition of the uterus, reduce the acid level, or have an effect on the sperm cells.

European researchers studying crossbred heifers found that ammonia has an adverse effect on the growth of eggs.

In addition, energy is taken from the cow to detoxify the ammonia from the urea, taxing an animal with low levels of necessary energy.

"If you have an animal and it already has a negative energy balance and you feed it a high ammonia diet, it's really magnifying the postpartum energy deficit. You're asking them to expend energy to detoxify the ammonia."

Not getting enough water may also increase the high ammonia problem, as water helps to dilute the urea. Additionally heat stress may compound the problem. Milk Urea Nitrogen (MUN) is a good diagnostic tool for the protein status of a herd, said O'Connor.

"When a group of cows have 19-20 mg percent MUN, the reproduction percentage can be compromised. I wouldn't get concerned about one cow, but when a group shows high levels, I'm suspicious of the way the ration has been managed from a protein standpoint."

A certain level of starch in the diet is beneficial for the rumen microbes to manufacture protein, which in turn generates milk production.

Dairy producers, said O'Connor, have to look in the mirror and decide if their own breeding system and techniques are "up to snuff before they get too excited about MUN numbers and saying, 'that's my problem.'"

He said, "Please, don't go out and risk lowering your milk production by lowering your protein today." O'Connor encouraged instead testing and working on a DHIA program.

O'Connor also addressed minerals and their effect on dairy reproduction. "So often people say, 'My herd has retained placentas, so I must have low selenium levels,'" said

(Turn to Page 15)

Dairy Reproduction Troubleshooting

O'Connor. Calcium, he said, is very important to muscle contraction.

In addition to calcium, phosphorus has been traditionally linked to reproductive performance by a 1950's study. However phosphorus intake is not a problem today, as studies now show that phosphorus levels are not as much of a factor in reproductive performance when cows are fed a good diet.

In a more recent, 785-cow worldwide study, researchers found that there is little or no difference in reproduction when the herd ingests normal or excessive levels of phosphorus.

In addition, lowered phosphorus levels did not affect the milk yield or bone strength of the cows.

"It's costly to feed that much phosphorus," he said, adding that in addition to cost, high levels of phosphorus is an environmental concern with nutrient management.

Breeding Systems

"I'm not up here to say you have to use hormones to get your cows pregnant. There are plenty of systems out there. As in all of life, the better ones seem to be the more complicated ones. I'm going to present results to whet your appetite, but let you make the decision," said O'Connor.

A producer's objective should be to develop a plan to get a high percentage of the cows pregnant in early lactation. A New York study found that if a cow comes into heat early, she will have a better first service conception rate.

"The more cycles a cow has prior to the time you want to breed the cow, the higher your success rate at the first service," he said.

Only 50 percent of heats are detected in the U.S., and 5-15 percent of cows are not in heat when they are bred. According to Genex figures, the conception rate in Pennsylvania is 33 percent and the pregnancy rate is 15 percent.

Monday Morning Program

"Producers are breeding cows not in heat or not catching them in heat because it's a labor-intensive chore," said O'Connor. The benefits of estrous synchronization may help alleviate some of these problems.

The "Monday Morning Program" is a 14-day, two-injection plan. The cows are injected with prostaglandin (PG), come into heat, and then bred. A "set up shot" will help the cow be more likely to respond to the breeding shot, said O'Connor. The PG shot is administered 14 days prior to the end of the voluntary waiting period before the cow is back in the breeding program.

For instance, if a producer waits 50 days before rebreeding a cow, administer the shot 36 days before the end of the waiting period. "A higher percentage of the cows should be in heat after the breeding shot," he said.

Ovsynch Program

The popular ovsynch program, combining prostaglandin and the GnRH hormone, now costs less than in the past. In fact, a half-dose of GnRH will suffice "if you can consistently deliver the smaller dose," he said.

Dairy Reproduction Troubleshooting

During a cycle, a cow may produce three "waves" of follicles. The Corpora lutea will inhibit a dominant follicle from becoming an egg, and a shot of prostaglandin will lower that level and release the follicle.

A new dominant follicle forms and is available to be ovulated by the second GnRH injection, which is given 48 hours after the PG injection, then timed insemination can take place.

The timed breeding system allows the producer to breed the cows without detecting heat. "If she shows heat after the injection you can breed her again, or breed her if she shows heat before."

Since the follicle produces estrogen, this system ovulates the animal before behavioral signs may take effect.

The ovsynch program does not eliminate heat detection, as producers must watch for return heat. The system also entails handling the cows four times in three days for the necessary shots and final breeding. Heifers usually do not have reproductive success on this program.

However the ovsynch program is a feasible alternative for herds in tiestall barns that are harder to check for heat. The program also reduces the days to service because the producer plans breeding by the calendar.

Presynch Program

The system gaining popularity, the presynch program, synchronizes a group of animals into a stage of their cycles, from 5-12 days, where they will have the best chance at responding to the ovsynch program.

"It uses more injections but has better synchrony, it brings more cows into heat at one time," said O'Connor. "It gets more cows into the stage that they're likely to respond." The expected conception rate is the highest in cows during the 5-12 day of a cycle.

Two prostaglandin shots are given at a 14-day interval, then the cows are moved to the ovsynch program. The cows are inseminated 16 hours after the last GnRH injection.

"It's two more injections but it has its benefits, because the cow may have more cycles before you want to breed her for the first time," said O'Connor. He reminded the audience that cows have greater reproductive success with more cycles before first service.

A BST shot given at the same time as the first GnRH shot or at the time of insemination may also improve results of breeding, since the same hormone in BST that improves milk production may also help in follicle growth.

GnRH, which comes from the brain of a cow, causes cows to cycle and may not be secreted when the cow is in negative energy balance.

In response to audience questions, O'Connor listed what causes a cow to repeat breeding. Nutrition deficiencies, acidosis, inaccurate heat detection, subclinical uterine infection, heat stress, genetic incompatibility, post-partum problems, poor AI technique, and infectious diseases could be problems.

Disease, Viruses Affect Reproduction

Dr. Dave Griswold covered bovine virus diarrhea (BVD) and neosporosis, causes of abortion in cows which create another reproductive concern.

BVD is worldwide, and approximately 80 percent of U.S. herds have had or now have the virus. The virus is transmitted from dam to calf or herdmate to herdmate.

"With the exception of earwax, anything that comes out of the cow has the virus in it if the animal is infected at the time," he said.

Because BVD is extremely immunodepressive, the cattle may develop and show signs of other diseases, causing misdiagnosis.

Approximately 70-80 percent of animals with BVD show no outward signs of illness, said Griswold. Within 3-4 days of exposure, the disease starts circulating and the animal begins to shed the infection and remain "viremic" for 2-3 weeks, giving the infection to their herdmates.

Another feature of BVD is the presence of persistently infected (PI) animals. Before a calf develops its immune system, it may be infected with the virus. Later, when the immune system develops, "it doesn't recognize the virus as foreign, so it never mounts a response to the virus. If the calf lives to term, it is born completely infected."

An infected animal, said Griswold, may shed millions of virus particles a day. "These viruses particles may come into contact with bred animals, create more PI animals, and perpetuate the disease indefinitely in the herd," he said.

In the past, PI animals were distinguishable and were known as the "runts" of the herd. Today, with nutrition and medication programs, "it's almost impossible to detect a PI animal."

Blood tests or a skin biopsy will identify a PI animal. Skin biopsies, which are not affected by colostral antibodies, are especially helpful in detecting an infected animal. A positive result should be reconfirmed in 3-4 weeks.

Immunizations, Biosecurity

The greatest cost of the disease is reproductive, in early embryonic losses or abortions.

Unfortunately, immunizations cannot protect a fetus. Even well-immunized cows are not able to block the uterus and prevent the virus from entering the calf.

Griswold recommends a modified live vaccine for heifers at 4-6 months, with a repeated injection at approximately one year of age and boosters during 30-40 days in milk.

Aborted fetuses should go to a diagnostic lab to check for the virus. If a farm does not have a record of the virus, a bulk tank milk sample will suffice as a testing tool to see if the disease is, in fact, present, said Griswold.

Biosecurity measures should include identifying and eliminating PI animals. Additionally, "treat animals from shows or fairs as biosecurity risks," said Griswold. These animals could not only be bringing the disease back, but also a bred animal could be carrying a PI animal by the time she arrives back on the farm.

Dairy Reproduction Troubleshooting

All new animals to the farm should be tested, quarantined, and isolated for four weeks before being introduced to the home herd. These animals should also be immunized 2-4 weeks before arriving at the farm.

The original herd should also receive booster shots 2-4 weeks prior to the addition of the new animals.

Neosporosis

Neosporosis, another cause of abortion, is a protozoa which finds its home in the canine species of both domestic and wild dogs. Dogs will shed the disease for 2-4 weeks, then seem to rid themselves of the disease.

In cattle, the infection is lifelong and incurable, occurs nationwide and worldwide, and may cause a cow to abort repeatedly. The cows usually abort when the fetus is 4-7 months old.

The transmission is fecal-oral from the dog to the cattle and also vertical, probably the main way the infection is spread, from the dam to the calf before birth.

An infected calf, if it not aborted, has tissue cysts in the brain but will develop normally.

Researchers are trying to determine if the infection changes health or production levels. Feedlot cattle, however, stay sick longer and require more medications when they are positive for neosporosis.

A prepurchase testing kit, keeping dogs away from the animals' feed or aborted materials, or feeding cattle housed outdoors on raised facilities, will help to control neospora. Dispose of aborted fetuses and placenta, advised Griswold. A vaccine, although unproven, is available.

"Abortion storms" occur when with a trigger, such as when the organism is suddenly introduced to a "naive" herd, environmental stresses occur, or other disease organisms such as BVD attack.

Be Alert For Signs Of Foot And Mouth Disease

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As a result of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease (FMD) in Europe, Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. and state Veterinarian Dr. John Enck urged Pennsylvania's agricultural producers and veterinarians to be alert for signs of the disease and report any suspicious cases to the department at (717) 783-6677.

Hayes and Enck also announced measures to monitor for FMD in Pennsylvania, and offered tips to travelers to countries stricken by outbreaks of the disease.

"Farmers, agricultural producers, veterinarians, even those outside of agriculture should be alert to the need to practice basic biosecurity in the face of this very virulent animal disease," Hayes said.

As of March 27, FMD had been diagnosed in 34 countries. Outbreaks have occurred in Great Britain, Northern Ireland, Argentina, and France. Measures are under way to prevent outbreaks in the U.S.

Enck noted precautions to prevent entry of the disease have quietly been in place and enforced for many years, and are constantly being evaluated and upgraded, especially in light of the highly publicized events in the United Kingdom.

"Despite the recent publicity, the threat is not new," Enck said. "The emergency in Great Britain and Europe is one more chapter of a saga that those concerned with animal health have watched unfold over the past several years.

"A number of preventive measures have been in force prior to the emergency in the United Kingdom and European Union."

Enck said the FMD virus poses special challenges, requiring proper disinfection and biosecurity protocols.

"People who have worked around or been near infected animals can inadvertently carry and spread the virus via their equipment, cars, clothing, shoes or even, for a short time, in their nasal passages or throat," Enck said.

"Studies indicate the virus can drift up to 40 miles on the wind — another hurdle to confining an outbreak to a specific area.

"Signs include high fever and vesicles or blisters on the muzzle, inside of mouth, tongue, and feet. These blisters will rupture, leaving raw or ulcerated areas. Animals affected will frequently drool or show signs of lameness.

"Producers and veterinarians are urged to be alert for signs of the disease and report any suspicious cases to (717) 783-6677."

Measures in place at the Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services at the Department of Agriculture to monitor animal diseases such as FMD include:

- An e-mail notification system for accredited veterinarians and livestock/poultry industry members to exchange information.
- A statewide network of veterinarians (foreign animal disease diagnosticians) who have received special federal training in the recognition, diagnosis, and management of foreign animal diseases, and who can respond on short notice if a disease such as Foot and Mouth Disease is suspected.
- The Pennsylvania Animal Health Emergency Preparedness Council, a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture initiative that represents livestock/poultry stakeholders in developing regulatory polices to manage disease emergencies.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) also has instituted a number of preventive measures, such as a ban on animals and meat products from the United Kingdom and European Union, and heightened inspection in accordance with existing policies. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is cooperating with its USDA counterparts in the investigation, inspection and enforcement of these federal restrictions on importation of animals and animal products.

The USDA's Regional Emergency Animal Disease Eradication Organization also has an updated response plan, which integrates state and USDA response to a foreign animal disease, that will likely be activated if FMD is discovered in the U.S.

Both the USDA and the state Agriculture Department have drafted guidance for travelers to FMD countries that, if followed, will minimize the risk of transporting the virus to the U.S.

Overseas travelers are advised to take the following precautions upon their return to the U.S.:

- Avoid contact with animals or areas where animals have been held for at least five days before returning to the U.S.
- Before returning to the U.S., launder or dry clean all clothing, jackets or coats.
- Those who have visited a farm, or come in contact with livestock during their international trip, should shower, shampoo and change into clean clothing. Wash or dry clean clothes — don't risk taking the virus home on contaminated clothing.
- Remove all dirt or organic material from shoes, luggage, personal items, etc. Thoroughly clean the items with disinfectant, such as bleach.
- Don't bring prohibited agricultural products home.
- Avoid contact with livestock or wildlife for at least five days after returning.

FMD, which has not been seen in the U.S. since 1929, is caused by a highly infectious virus that can cause death or disabling blisters and sores in and around the mouth, muzzle, teats, and feet of livestock with cloven or "split" hooves. Cattle, pigs, sheep, goats and deer are highly susceptible, and can exhibit clinical disease signs after an incubation period of only three to eight days. To stop the spread, affected or exposed animals must be slaughtered, then burned or buried. Premises and equipment must be disinfected to prevent the spread of FMD.

FMD could cause devastating economic damage in the U.S. An outbreak would cost millions of dollars to fight, in addition to the thousands of animals that would likely be destroyed. Livestock markets would be closed. Normal flow of animal products would be disrupted. Transportation of animals would be restricted. Exports of beef and pork would be embargoed. Population control might have to be established as a biosecurity measure if there is an outbreak. In the end, no one - producer, consumer or taxpayer - would be unaffected.

For more information on Foot and Mouth Disease, visit the Department of Agriculture Homepage through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda-.state.pa.us.

Livestock Certification Course Teaches Law, Public Relations

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A free seminar for Pennsylvania producers has helped agriculture representatives learn important information about the law, public relations, and current agricultural practices.

Those attending a recent course conducted at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center took four tests to become environmentally certified through the Penn State Livestock Certification Course.

The voluntary, one-day event included four sessions and subsequent tests to achieve certification. The training sessions, sponsored by Penn State University, Penn Ag Industries, and the Pennsylvania Conservation Districts, were conducted in seven counties across the commonwealth.

Public Awareness

Amy Van Blarcom, public liaison in cooperation with PennAg Industries Association and the Pennsylvania Conservation District, working through a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, covered public perception, the perception of agriculture's role as a polluter, and community relations topics in her presentation.

"The public is very unaware of what agriculture is about, even though producers are doing a good job at education," said Van Blarcom. "What they think they're believing isn't the actual issue. Producers need to not only sell their product but the environment as well. Let the public know best management practices are being followed."

Van Blarcom quoted a 1999 study from the National Environmental Education and Training Foundation that stated, "Unfortunately, the level of knowledge that Americans have on environmental subjects does not match up to what they think they know... Americans have an A+ for support of the environment and an F for understanding of causes of basic environmental problems in the 21st century."

Communication is key in informing, educating, and promoting agriculture to the public. If a producer is planning an expansion, "let your neighbors know ahead of time they may not agree but will appreciate you told them your plans; communications builds trust that you're not doing anything behind their back," she said.

Do not use technical terms when dealing with the media or the public, said Van Blarcom. Be responsive, not just offering lip service to the public, and establish credibility by finding answers promptly.

Get your permits in order and talk to everyone you should, said Van Blarcom. The best defense against a formal complaint or lawsuit is complying with regulations and careful documentation.

A successful community relations plan includes "selling" the operation, she said. Inform the public of your nutrient management plan, conservation award, or involvement in clean water programs. "Let the people know you're doing a great thing," she said.

Appearance of the farm is another important issue, because a sloppy appearance can give the perception of environmental threats.

"Believe it or not, appearance does play a significant role in how people view farming. People that have no idea what agriculture is are driving by all the time."

Tours alleviate misconceptions, suggested Van Blarcom. Informative pamphlets for visitors to take home are also helpful educational tools.

Law and Agriculture

Christine Kellet, Gettysburg, law professor at the Penn State Dickinson School of Law and director of Penn State Dickinson Agriculture Law and Research Center, highlighted important laws, defenses, and restrictions dealing with agriculture.

Kellet first pointed out the availability of the center. Located in Carlisle, the center answers queries and provides educational or reference materials and programs for the agriculture industry. Additional information is located at http://www.dsl.psu.edu/aglaw/aglaw.html.

"Society is moving to the countryside, and there will be more and more regulations with the increasing intersection. As the industry grows and society becomes more complex, the law and the regulations grow evermore," said Kellet.

"Right now, the law in Pennsylvania is actually very favorable and supports agriculture. We know that's our roots and we respect people in agriculture."

Agriculture security areas were Kellet's first topic. To become an ag security area a producer, or a producer and a neighbor, must have 250 or more acres. The township, by recognizing this area, allows the farm to keep free of ordinances detrimental to farming that may affect other properties.

The law which requires all permanent structures to have at least a 30-inch foundation, for example, would not apply to farms.

"In an agriculture security area, government entities cannot take property. The number one reason for loss of farmland in the U.S. is that the farmer can't make it. The second is the government building highways, schools, pools, new golf courses, sewage disposal plants, or storm runoff systems," said Kellet.

If an ag security area is 500 acres or more and has good soil, the land qualifies for conservation easements. Funded by counties and the commonwealth, the easements pay the difference to the farmer of fair market value and the farming value to give money in return for easement that says land stays in farming.

"It's a wonderful program, but know what you are signing," said Kellet. "It's in perpetuity, forever. The easement says the land can be used for farming. You can't ease the land and then parcel the land off and give pieces to the family or build on the land for yourself for retirement."

Kellet also touched on preferential taxation programs such as the "Clean and Green" program. In 1972, the constitutional amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution allowed the legislature to tax the forest and agriculture land at use value.

Livestock Certification Course

The program includes regulations — a producer cannot use the land for commercial reasons. A violation of the program means that a producer will owe rollback taxes for the last seven years. A landowner should research roadside markets or land rental to make sure they are not in violation of the program.

"Preferential taxation is a tax subsidy. It depends on the good will of the legislature. The constitution doesn't say "must" but "may," so producers could be taxed differently. Now our legislature feels that if you're putting the land in farming, the public gets a benefit. If we lost the good will of the legislature, we could lose the preferential taxation," she said.

The "Right to Farm" legislation is a misnomer, said Kellet. "It's not a right, it's a defense to a nuisance suit."

If a producer has been farming for one year and has not substantially changed the operation, often the operator is immune from a nuisance suit unless that nuisance is a direct threat to health and safety.

The federal Farm Program, money from the government, supplied one-half of farm income last year.

"A lot of townships are not farmer-friendly right now, they're trying to keep out producers," she said. The problem is that the people writing the ordinances are not farmers. The ordinances are looked at because farmers aren't in there.

"Get proactive on these ordinances. The problem is we sit back and say, 'they're hurting me,' and don't do anything. Get in there and do something about it. The regulations are not going to go away.

"People expect the law to do everything. When there's flies, if my neighbor — who has flies — won't do anything, my next call will be to the township. If you don't get involved with these ordinances, you will be hurt by them, because those who are hurt by the flies are in talking to the township," said Kellett.

Nutrient Management

Kevin Seibert, Lancaster County conservation district nutrient management specialist, discussed land application, nutrient management requirements, and the district's role in the planning process.

Nutrient management optimizes economic return from the nutrients and minimizes the negative impacts of nutrients on the environment. "It's important for producers of all sizes," said Seibert.

Overapplication of nutrients leads to water pollution because of sediment and manure runoff and nutrient leaching. Pollution also presents health concerns when high nitrate levels are involved.

The Nutrient Management Act regulates high-density livestock farms and provides technical and financial assistance.

According to the Nutrient Management Act, enacted in 1997, statewide requirements call for nutrient management plans for concentrated animal operations (CAOs) which have animal densities exceeding 2,000 pounds of animal weight per acre of land available for manure spreading on an annualized basis.

The plans are developed by a nutrient management specialist certified by the Department of Agriculture. Planners are certified by passing an exam and plans are reviewed by certified nutrient management specialist employed by county conservation districts.

Conservation districts are responsible for program administration, said Seibert. Financial assistance is usually available for plan development.

"I'd like to see every farmer certified and write their own plan," said Seibert. "A producer could, in essence, change the plan on the seat of the tractor, go back and amend plan and keep records of what they did. They know what needs to be done and what it takes to get there," he said.

Writing up a plan includes detailed farm identification and description. The number of acres, what watershed the area is located in, and type of soils are taken into consideration.

Nutrient application information includes manure generation, sources of other nutrients, expected crop yields, manure application rates, timing, method of application, alternate uses for excess manure, and storm water management.

Phosphorus, not just nitrogen, can be included in the plan, said Seibert, who believes that phosphorus will be included in plans in the future.

"Whatever you put on, you have to look at it and decide if it has a nutrient value. You need to calculate manure analysis to see how it compares to book value. Know exactly what the manure has in nutrients or you may even apply less manure than crops need. Also consider if your fields have residual nutrients from past applications, or residual nutrients from legumes," advised Seibert.

(Turn to Page 31)

Odor And Emissions

Robert Meinen, Penn State senior extension associate, spoke about odor and gaseous emissions.

Odor, caused by compounds such as ammonia, sulfides, or organic acids, overlaps with emotions. Unpleasant odors affect mood, prompt memories, or even change perception, making odor a key in a producer's neighbor relations.

"Pennsylvania is the number one population in the country of rural residents, meaning that we have more people living close to our agriculture than anywhere else," said Meinen. Because of the possibility of depressed property values and changed quality of life of neighbors, producers need to take steps in odor dispersion control.

Spread manure early in the day, recommended Meinen, so when the ground warms the air takes the odor up, away from residents. Cooler temperatures will send odors into a valley.

Penn State will evaluate the odor potentials of a facility, said Meinen, so a producer can get recommendations on controlling odor and the approach the township supervisor with Penn State's stamp of approval.

Biocovers, deep pit storage, or the digester system are options of storing manure. Manure applications could be injected or incorporated, the "best way to keep nutrients and reduce odors," said Meinen.

In residential areas, producers should avoid holiday and weekend spreading and notify the neighbors about the spreading schedule to avoid applying manure during special events.

Bedding, which holds moisture in place, gives the odor less of a chance to escape. Consequently bedding is less offensive when it is applied to the field. Keeping the aisle, pens, and animals as clean and dry as possible not only maintains an aesthetically pleasing facility but also keeps odor levels down.

Farm appearance, understandably, sends a message to the neighbors. "People drive by and say, 'if he can't take care of his yard, is he going to care about managing well?'" he said. If a facility is visible, and "not kept up well, it will be ranked even worse," said Meinen.

Be a good neighbor and communicate "so you and your neighbors will be working with each other rather than against each other."

"I purchased the Roto-Mix mixer because I wanted to be able to feed long hay as part of my TMR mix"

- Roy Brubaker, Hershey, PA

The Brubakers feed on average 500 lbs. of baled Timothy hay per feeding and they do like the way the Roto-Mix handles it. Since the Brubakers purchased their Roto-Mix mixer a little over a year ago, three of their neighbors have also bought Roto-Mix mixers from Lapps.

- Roy Brubaker and his family are milking 220 Holsteins.
- Herd average 24,000 lbs.
- Two feeding groups, 2 times per day feeding, 2 times per day milking.
- Bought a RotoMix 414 mixer from Lapps to replace a Rissler trailer mixer.

Lapp's Barn Equipment also specializes in tunnel ventilation & circulating fans, curtains, waterers, and Alanta animal water beds.

Cattle Feeder's Day Features Quality Assurance

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Producing a quality product, as any farmer will attest, is not an accident but is the result of education and experience.

At Lancaster's Cattle Feeder's Day, producers took the opportunity to educate themselves on topics ranging from the future of the business, handling systems, process-verified cattle, food safety measures, and quality assurance certification.

Process Verified

Ken Jordan, San Saba, Texas, is director of auction sales of the Cattle InfoNet, a branch of e-merge. He also directs several auction markets for his family's business. More than 200,000 cattle have passed through the family's three auction markets.

"Our philosophy is the service. We felt all along that it's beneficial to the individual if you weaned the calf properly, but previously no one got paid for it," said Jordan.

"We believed that process verification was a coming thing. As an individual, you're going to feel a lot of pressure from the retail end for source verification. It's not enough just to say it's safe."

Take a proactive role, said Jordan, and a portray a confident stance that "You know what you're doing. If you sell that, people will continue to consume beef."

Jordan foresees bigger discounts and tougher marketing for cattle not weaned in the near future.

"The biggest reason why no one bought preconditioned cattle is that no one can verify what's been done," he said.

Also, too much variation and no consistency gave feeders a different mix of animals. Verification aids in bringing about a uniform program, believes Jordan.

Electronic eartags have been an important tool in Jordan's process verified program. "The eartags allowed us to manage and carry data about shots or weights." Placed in the left ear, the tags are positioned so feed yards can easily scan the device when calves enter the lot.

This year Jordan hopes to see 1 million head of cattle with the electronic identification ear tags, which cost from $2.40 to $3.25.

With these tags, producers have access to getting carcass data for their animals, but "don't make dramatic genetic changes overnight," warned Jordan. "first learn how to manage what you have. Good calves can be messed up. Most, probably 70 percent improvement, can be found in quality management alone. The rest we can tweak in genetics," he said.

Guidelines

All process-verified cattle must meet specific sale guidelines. Benefits, said Jordan, include properly weaned, uniformly sorted animals. Cattle in the marketing facilities all meet same health requirements. Jordan reports no more than 75 pounds variance in a whole group.

"Feeders get better cattle at the end if they start better at the front," he said.

Guidelines include, among other requirements, 45 days of weaning, a four-way virus and other vaccines, and deworming at weaning.

Recommended nutrition is a high-quality, energy ration the first three-to-five days, then the calves should be hand-fed on grass, given free choice salt and minerals, and have a clean, adequate water supply — "conditioned but not too fat," said Jordan. The calves, then, are ready to perform at the feedlot after the sale.

Ken Jordan from Jordan Cattle Auction, San Saba, Texas, presented his experience with marketing process verified cattle at his family's auction business.

Required health records include signing a health verification form, and attaching receipts complete with the name, lot, serial number, and dates and location of administration of vaccines.

Required processing means the bull calves are knife cut prior to or a weaning, at which time they are also dehorned or tipped. The vaccinations need to be in the neck area, preferably sub-q.

When producers meet requirements and decide to market their animals, the cattle are scheduled for a specific sale time. The cattle's ear tags are scanned as they are funneled through the barn. A computer takes a reading, classifies the animal, and directs which pen the animal go, where they enter a group of similar animals.

Each consignor is paid on the weight of that group, as the animals are merchandised as a uniform group.

"By the time the cattle arrive at the feedyard, the data (weight, vaccination records) are there so they can start managing right away," said Jordan.

Although the feedlot may pay more for the cattle, he said, increased efficiency help put those dollars and more back down into the bottom line. Jordan estimates that producers marketing their cattle through the process-verified system receive an $8-12 premium per hundredweight in comparison to the regular sale prices. The cattle in these sales weigh from 400-700 pounds.

Jordan looks for growing potential in the cattle business in the next 4-6 years with changes in the marketing process and process verification. "There are opportunities for producers who use good production techniques to finally benefit," he said.

Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) Program

After receiving funding in October from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance program is now "what's on the horizon," according to Wendall Landis, program director. Goals of the program include increasing carcass quality by lowering residues, defects, and pathogen contamination.

"Beef quality assurance is everyone's job," said Landis. Today, 47 states representing 90 percent of America's beef production have BQA programs. Twenty-five states have producer certification, a number growing rapidly, up 13 from a year ago. The program, said Landis, helps to avoid product defects and expands exports by increasing consumer confidence. Producers accept responsibility for cattle while on the feedlot, and are recognized for their efforts to produce safe beef.

Training sessions will be conducted from February through May, with point-of-purchase surveys for consumers in May and June. Producers will complete a two-part train-

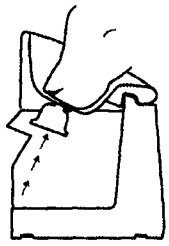
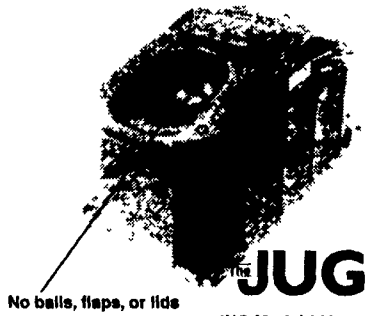
The JUG Livestock Waterer Cleans Itself - so you don't have to!



The JUG's Feed-Trap catches debris and keeps it out of the reservoir.



No balls, flaps, or lids to get in the way

JUG Model 202 1-hole and 4-hole models also available

The JUG'S self-cleaning design
The JUG'S Feed-Trap™ design prevents feed and other debris from entering the reservoir tank. Each time the animal drinks, any debris in the Feed-Trap is removed The tank stays clean!

No Algae - No slime
Since the JUG's reservoir is light-tight, no algae will grow in it. That means no slime build-up

Clean Water = productivity
You know that animals will drink more when the water is clean. And more water consumption yields more productivity.

Tough, long-lasting construction
The JUG is made of tough, roto-molded plastic. It stands up to abuse dished out by livestock It won't chip and pit like concrete ing included a classroom and hands-on, chute-side training, besides a recertification every two years.

Producers who are certified receive a Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance certification manual, a certified beef producer farm sign, identification or the cattle with ear or back tags, and a certificate of completion.

"Image is everything," he said. "This protects consumer confidence in beef safety guidelines."

Food Safety

Dr. Bill Henning, Penn State extension meats specialist, addressed "Food Safety Measures at Packing Plants."

Last year there were 33 million cases of foodborne illnesses, said Henning, and 9,000 deaths. Approximately 10,000-20,000 cases of e.coli, found in ground beef, lettuce, sprouts, or apple cider, occur yearly. E.coli is found in 2-4 percent of cattle, and 25 percent of America's feedyards.

USDA requirements control biological, physical, and chemical hazards with the Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point (HACCP) program.

A muscle, said Henning, is sterile, but can be contaminated from the outside by fecal material or contact with intestines. Bacteria adhere to the tissue and must be trimmed, not washed by conventional means, to remove it. Hair, dirt, manure, or dirty employee hands are also agents of bacterial spread.

At least 90 percent of the contamination comes from the hide, which makes the bacteria difficult to control. The best plan, said Henning, is to keep the animal clean. Antibiotics, probiotics, urea, or universal testing do not seem to help contain the bacteria.

The packer is where the contamination most likely will happen, and thus is "the only place we can really control it," said Henning.

To prevent contamination, plastic over exposed areas, a redesign of hide pullers, and pressure washing the dirtiest cattle seem to help.

To remove or reduce contamination, packing plants can rinse with a mild organic acid to prevent initial attachment of bacteria. A steam vacuum or steam pasteurization cabinets are also intervention methods. Dehairing or electrical stimulation after the acid rinse are also control measures.

Cattle Management

Dr. John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist, taught the "proper cattle management" segment of the quality assurance program.

"Things we have to keep in mind in terms of health management is that when we're sticking that needle in, we're sticking it in something that someone is going to eat. We have to ask ourselves, 'would I want to eat this?'"

Adhering to bottle label instructions is imperative, stressed Comerford. Besides making sure the vaccine or medicine is labeled for cattle, he said, be sure to give the correct dosage using the proper route of administration. Withdrawal time should be carefully noted and followed.

"Only the vet can break these 'rules' with permission from you," said Comerford. "You're the one that will be responsible."

top of the shoulder to the base of the ear to the point of the shoulder. Most injections use a 16-18 gauge needle, 1½ inches long to get deep into the muscle.

Sub-Q injections should be given into tented skin. A sharp, new needle will decrease bruising and the spread of illness between cattle. Do not administer more than 10 cc's in any one location, said Comerford, and should be three inches apart. Implants should be given in the middle third of the ear.

Feed Quality Management

"Source-verified cattle will be an absolute necessity in the future, it's going to be our product from the farm gate to the consumer's plate," said Dr Harold Harpster, Penn State ruminent nutritionist.

Feed quality, said Harpster, is a phrase of beef quality assurance entirely in the producer's hands, and requires daily diligence.

According to Harpster, for homegrown feeds, we need records from planting to consumption, especially records for pesticide, herbicide, and fertilizer use to prevent possible problems.

A daily inspection of feedstuffs is important, said Harpster. A producer should note the odor, color, moisture, temperature, and any foreign material in the fed. A small sample of purchased feedstuff should be set aside, along with the source, date, amounts, and description data for record purposes.

Producers should hold "suspect feeds," urged Harpster, until they are analyzed to decide if they are free of high levels of mold and micotoxins.

FDA-approved additives should be the only additives in the feed, said Harpster. Carefully follow withdrawal times and keep accurate records here, also. Proper mixing is also important, as the additive is more effective if it is evenly distributed in the feed. And, as always, feeding ruminent-derived protein is outlawed.

Do your homework in feeding by-products, said Harpster. Vegetable waste may contain herbicide and pesticide wastes, and fats and oils may be susceptible to rancidity and contaminants.

Fuel, insecticides, pesticides, and fertilizers should not be stored in the same area as feeds. Also improper use of machines or implements may spread disease. "Do you clean the barn, then use the same bucket for a scoop of feed?" asked Harpster.

Targeted Breeding/ Buying

Consumer satisfaction, said Dr. Bill Henning, determined by quality grades, should drive production.

Henning, extension meats specialist, said, "They want taste fat, they don't want waste fat. Know your customer, whether they want modest, moderate, or highly-abundant marbling. Fill your customer's needs. Produce something that satisfies the consumer."

Bruising, said Henning, costs $20 million annually, as much as $175 per head. Ideal finish depends on genetic propensity to marble, but depends on the breed of animal. Holsteins marble well, he said, but "is it economical to feed them to the desired finish?" he asked. "Trying to reach high-end markets may not be economical." Packers want 700-950-pound carcasses, and cuts small enough to fit in the box.

"One steer with a tough steak will affect over 100 people, so we really have to be careful," said Henning.

"Understand the type of cattle you are feeding. Don't feed past the optimal end point. Feed to what the customer wants."

Cattle Feeders Future

Agriculture economics professor H. Louis Moore, Penn State, gave his forecast for the livestock economy in 2001. The national economy, he said, will understandably have an impact on agriculture.

America has experienced 10 years of economic growth without a slowdown, the longest in the history of the nation. Inflation is under control, the country has a low unemployment rate, the interest rate is declining, and tax cut prospects are on the horizon.

In addition, however, according to Moore's analysis, consumers are wary about the future, unemployment will begin to increase, interest rates will decline, and inflation will slow. California's energy problem and the actions of the new administration remain questions yet to be filled in for economic forecasters.

Since 1996, farmers have seen a larger gap between what

1) Western Canada Dairy Seminar Proceedings

Seminars are often the best way to stay current with the fast pace of developments in dairy production, but it's difficult to find the time to attend every seminar. The Western Canada Dairy Seminar is held every March in Alberta, and is one of the top dairy seminars in North America. They always have several top presentations concerning various aspects of dairy cattle health, and the proceedings from the conference are outstanding. Users of the site can search for papers on their topic(s) or browse by topic/author.

2) Johne's Information Center

Johne's is an economically important dairy cattle disease that has the potential to threaten the positive image in the eyes of the consumer that is currently enjoyed by dairy products. It is in the best interest of dairy producers to eradicate Johne's from their herd, and the Johne's Information Center is the best site on the Internet devoted to a dairy-related disease.

3) Dairy Publications by the Univ. of Florida

Universities have a long tradition of providing high quality research-based publications concerning dairy cattle, and that tradition continues into the new millennium. One of the states with the best set of publications on-line is the University of Florida. They have a special section, Reproduction and Health, that has a comprehensive set of publications, with some new fact-sheets concerning metabolic diseases of dairy cattle.

4) Nebraska Veterinary and Biomedical Sciences Newsletter

The University of Nebraska newsletter leads the way for dairy health-related veterinary newsletters. Important changes in policy are announced and the site contains summaries and interpretive reviews of cattle-related veterinary publications. This newsletter is intended for the well-informed reader and provides an outstanding entre into the latest scientific advances in the expert-reviewed research literature.

5) Consultant: A Diagnostic Support System for Veterinary Medicine

Dr. M.E. White, from the Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine, has been a pioneer in applying the computer principles of artificial intelligence to veterinary medicine. He has made his pioneering program, Consultant, available for users on the WWW, which represents the first of many programs that will likely become available.

Consultant has been run on various types of computers over the years, and its database of information has been expanded to include over 500 signs or symptoms, over 5,000 diagnoses, and about 18,000 literature references.

6) Penn State's Dairy & Animal Science Home Page

Penn State's Dairy and Animal Science Department have been a pioneer in publishing their information on the Internet, and their latest revision of the Department's home page makes it one of the best on the WWW. Some of the highlights include the "Monitoring Dairy Heifer Growth" publication that sets the standard for Holsteins in the US, the Dairy Digest newsletter, outstanding publications concerning dairy reproductive problems. Team Dairy information, the proceedings from the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Management and Dairy Feed Industry Seminars, an on-line computer program that calculates the expected net revenue from one unit of semen, and some fun items like sending an e-mail postcard of a cow to a friend.

7) Ken Bailey's Dairy Outlook

Dairy marketing is playing an increasingly important role to the profitability of dairy farms. Before herds can make informed decisions concerning various health-related issues, the overall financial picture of the dairy farm must be considered. Dr. Ken Bailey started providing a weekly analysis of trends/opportunities in dairy marketing when he was at the University of Missouri, and he's continued that trend since coming to Penn State. Besides his weekly analysis and graph of milk prices, Ken provides Microsoft Excel computer spreadsheet that examines various dairy marketing strategies and includes links to other valuable sites.

8) Jim Quigley's APC Calf Notes

Dr. Jim Quigley started making his very valuable calf-related information available via the WWW when he was at the University of Tennessee, and he's continued that approach since joining the American Protein Corporation. Now with the name APC Calf Notes, Jim maintains the most complete set of calf-related information on the Internet. A separate health and management section has fifteen outstanding articles in just this section, and there are special sections for colostrum and colostrum feeding, calf starters and rumen development and liquid feeding for calves

www.americanprotein.com/calf/calfnotes/APCcalfnotes.htm

9) NetVet's Cow Links

When you start using the Internet, most people begin by examining what's available. Dr. Ken Boschert, a veterinarian at Washington Univ. of St. Louis, is the pioneer in providing an up-to-date comprehensive set of links to the various sites on the Internet. He termed his site "NetVet," and it's won most of the awards for WWW sites. Ken maintains his Cow Links, and it's one of my recommendations for people just getting started on the Internet.

10) Dairy-L Home Page

Dairy-L is an email list serv that brings together dairymen and industry representatives to address the latest issues in dairying. The Dairy-L home page has information on subscribing, searching the archives of past messages and getting the most out of Dairy-L.

the farmers pay (fuel, machinery, labor, and materials) and what they receive is broadening.

"This is putting a squeeze on farmers in the country," said Moore. The U.S. corn production varied greatly over the early 1990s, "We had five good corn crops in a row, and we haven't used it at that rate," he said.

Additionally, in soybean production, the last four crops have been very excellent crops. Farmers have produced a billion more bushels than a decade ago on the same acreage.

New technology has drastically increased production. In 1932, for example, farmers produced 25 bushels of corn per acre. By 2000 farmers were producing 137.7 bushels of corn per acre. "It hasn't plateaued," he said.

If grain prices stay reasonable, "those of you who are in the livestock feeding business can plan on the same prices," said Moore, unless media attention on "mad cow disease" drastically changes demand.

In the U.S., meat supply shows chicken on the increase of market share for meats because of convenience, price, and consistency.

America is host to approximately 98 million cattle. While this number is declining, U.S. cattle are fed to higher weights.

Per-capita consumption of meat is projected to be 200 pounds this year. Since 1990, this number has increased by 20 pounds per person, leading Moore to question whether America is truly moving toward a vegetarian diet.

"A good economy increases that number, that's why the economy has such an impact on 2001," said Moore.

For supply prospects, said Moore, the percentage of cattle will go down 3.5 percent, at $72-$77 per hundredweight. Hog and broiler supplies are expected to trend upward three percent, and turkey 2.5 percent.

"With the right management, you'll make money," said Moore.

Cattle Handling Systems

Proper handling facilities are integral to a cattle management plan, explained Dan McFarland, ag engineering agent based out of York County.

Added safety, meeting quality assurance guidelines, easier treatment opportunities, stress reduction on both the animal and the handler, and fewer bruising incidence are all good reasons to have a system, he said.

A complete handling system should gather, direct, hold, allow the animals to be sorted, and position the animals for the handler to work on.

A collection alley, usually 10-16 feet wide, moves the animals from the barn or pasture to the work area. From there, the animals move into the holding pen, able to accommodate 30-50 animals.

The next step, the crowding pen, holds 8-10 animals and encourages the animals to go through the working chute. A ratcheting crowding gate will reduce the space available to the animals to encourage them to move in to the working chute.

The chute may be 20-50 feet long, 28-32 inches wide, be solid and curved so the cattle can't see the end of the line until they are almost there.

FEATURES:

60 mil thick H.D.P.E. Liner
Geotextile underlayment
Leak detection system
Economical Manure Storage
Seals manure in, subsurface water out
Concrete ramp for manure agitation and pumping

Manada Construction Co. specializes in the agricultural field, excavating for N.R.C.S. projects, site grading for all types of animal housing and manure storage facilities.

Ten years ago as confinement and dairy operations became larger we recognized a need for a more economical way to store manure. Working within the guidelines of the N.R.C.S. we developed the H.D.P.E. Liner System. This plastic material is durable, U.V. resistant, long-lasting and cost efficient. Each system has a built in drainage and leak detection system to insure the liners integrity. Concrete agitation ramps are incorporated for dairy operations.

We have installed over 100 installations in Pa. and surrounding states.

Our family business would like to take this opportunity to thank all the farm families we have had the pleasure to serve over the last 30 years and are looking forward to serving the agricultural community in the future.

Thank You

Confident footing in the system is also important. McFarland recommends concrete footing with the diamond groove pattern and perhaps grit, troweled into the concrete.

The loading area should have all-weather access, solid sides, adjustable height for vehicles, and have bumpers and side gates to close the gaps.

Several varieties of headgates are available, from self-catching, which may cause bruising with horned or wild animals, to scissor stanchion, which animals may trip over, to straight or curved headgates.

Cost ranges from $1,200 to $21,000. Aside from the materials, the area should have uniform lighting. Cattle hesitate going from dark to light areas since their eyes do not adjust quickly to changes. They will also want to stop and investigate stray objects such as a cap or clipboard, be afraid of glare, and view shadows as barriers.

ROASTING PROVIDES STERILIZED GRAIN
Only open flamed roasting eliminates molds and reduces toxins to tolerable levels

~ It's effect on grain...
Testing results from samples of Flame Roasted corn, barley and oats reduced the 4-deoxynivalenol (DON) of the grains by 37% and Zearalenone (ZEA) by an average of 77%
~ Roasting reduced the mold counts by between 48 and 98% (PO 05 ZEA by 50% and free ergosterol by 41%)
~ Roasting has caused 40-80% degradation of aflatoxin B, and up to 90% degradation of ochratoxin A
*Documentation of above statements available upon request

For Beef and Dairy...
~ Less fermentable feeds in the total ration Better rumen health
~ Better herd health reflects improved breeding, less abortions and healthier feet meaning fewer veterinarian bills
~ Increased milk production in dairy cattle
~ Increased daily grain in beef

For Swine...
~ Roasting grain increases productivity by 20-30%
~ Sterilizing corn can increase weight gain for growers
~ Can improve fertility in gilts and sows

For Poultry...
~ Removing molds on grain fed to poultry can improve broiler weight gains
~ Improve resistance to infection and increase egg production
